Queen Victoria? She's That Bronze Statue!

By NORM CRIBBENS

The tall bronze lady outside the Legislative Buildings is 150 years old today.

Nearly 1,000 Victoria schoolchildren celebrated Queen Victoria's birthday at the annual IODE ceremony staged on the soft green lawns of the Buildings—but few of them knew who she was.

"She was an old, old lady who lived a long, long time ago," said an 11-year-old girl student at Belmont Junior Secondary.

"She is that statue down there," answered a 12-year-old boy.

●

Many of the youngsters said they were celebrating the birthday of Victoria city but were vague about the queen.

This reporter has covered the IODE ceremony for almost 10 years and the impression today is that youngsters know less about Queen Victoria than those of, say, 1958.

The same view was gathered by Robin Burgess, a University of Victoria student reporter on the Times staff for the summer, who, six years ago, attended the ceremony as a Girl Guide.

Everything looks smaller now (she writes). Somehow the massive archway into the Buildings doesn't seem quite so massive and awesome as it did then.

●

I knew Queen Victoria was a ruler who died many years ago and that the city was named after her. But the main significance of the occasion was missing a whole half-day of school.

I was proud to be a Guide and to stand at attention in uniform with the other Guides. Today I was disappointed that the IODE flag-bearers did not wear white as they used to because that was very vivid in my memory.

That day in 1963 was particularly hot and I recall exciting rumors spreading through the ranks that cadets were fainting in the heat and St. John Ambulance Corps had gone to their aid.

Young as I was, I loved the pomp and circumstance of the occasion.

●

As in other years, Victoria schoolchildren today formed a massed choir on the steps of the Buildings. Their many-hued dresses and suits made a bold splash, offset by the flags and uniforms of the cadets.

Behind, in their vivid red blazers, were boys and girls of Esquimalt Junior Secondary School Band.

Facing them in soldierly array, were navy, army and air force cadets, Canadian Scottish cadets, St. John Nursing Cadets, Girl Guides and Brownies.

Hundred of spectators — many of them service veterans — watched the ceremony.

●

Making his first appearance at this event, Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson was guest of honor and faced the children from a blue, flower-decked dias.

He recalled that Queen

Benson Plans New Budget Next Month

Small Tax Changes Expected

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson said today he will bring down a budget next month.

He did not give a date.

Mr. Benson said simply "yes" when former prime minister John Diefenbaker asked in the Commons whether he will bring down a budget next month. The last budget was Oct. 22, 1968.

Mr. Diefenbaker asked whether the budget will contain legislation to meet the inflationary trend.

Mr. Benson said Mr. Diefenbaker would have to wait to see.

Mr. Benson said some time ago he intended to make a general review of the economy next month, but until today did not refer to it formally as a budget.

There have been indications the minister does not intend making any major changes in current tax rates. He has said government revenues and expenditures are running at about what he predicted last October. The prediction then was that he would balance the budget by next March 31, the end of the current fiscal year.

Some small tax changes may be made next month, primarily to tidy up current tax laws and plug loopholes in preparation for a general revision of tax law to be undertaken later this year.

SOUGHT MORE DETAILS

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked Prime Minister Trudeau whether the government is still working on the calculation that this year's inflationary factor will be 3½ per cent.

The prime minister replied that this will be discussed in Mr. Benson's budget speech.

The calculation was contained in the finance minister's last budget speech, in October.

Mr. Stanfield asked whether it is still the government's view that inflationary pressure has begun to ease.

The prime minister replied there is "no implication" that the government is not still concerned about inflation and will not adopt policies to curb it.

Outside the House, Mr. Benson turned aside questions about budget contents, advising reporters also to wait and see.

He did say, however, that the pre-budget policy paper on the state of the economy will be produced next week or early the following week.

Mr. Benson felt his economic forecasts in the last budget had been fulfilled reasonably well.

He said he will be able to balance the budget, but did not make it clear whether it will be done in the one next month. The government has promised a balanced budget.

'EXHAUSTED' BLAIBERG TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

BLAIBERG
. . . given oxygen

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Dr. Philip Blaiberg, 59, the world's longest-surviving heart transplant recipient, was taken to hospital by ambulance today — three days after doctors ordered him to bed in his apartment for a week-long rest cure to recover from "exhaustion."

Mrs. Blaiberg said her husband was admitted to hospital for x-ray examination which could not be performed in their apartment.

His condition is satisfactory and he is expected back home Monday, she said.

Blaiberg was given oxygen in the ambulance on the way to Groote Schuur Hospital.

Chinese Rejoin Malay Cabinet

KUALA LUMPUR (CP) — Chinese members of Malaysia's governing Alliance party were reported today to have reversed an earlier decision to quit the government and agreed to join a caretaker cabinet to govern the riot-torn country.

The riots between Chinese and Malays had been touched off by the decision of the Malaysian Chinese Association three days ago to withdraw following general elections that sharply reduced the Alliance's majority. The Chinese were the biggest election losers among the party's candidates, who included Malays and Indians.

The violence was subsiding today although sporadic gunfire would still be heard and a state of emergency declared Thursday night remained in effect.

The decision of the Chinese Association members to rejoin the government was announced by Deputy Prime Minister Tun Abdul Razak, a Malay who on Thursday was appointed chief of the National Operations Council co-ordinating civil and military activities.

Razak told reporters the situation is still very serious.

He said tension spread to the Malaysian Borneo states of Sabah and Sarawak, where the government has suspended scheduled elections under new emergency regulations.

The emergency council was reported to have supplanted the federal and state parliaments, and sources said a new cabinet would be announced later today.

FIGUREHEAD STATUS?

There were some indications that Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman was being relegated to figurehead status, but Rahman said in a broadcast Thursday that Razak would be "answerable directly to me."

The council's first official act was to order all newspapers throughout the country to suspend publication. A spokesman said they would be allowed to re-open in a few days and pre-publication censorship then would be in effect.

The censorship rules do not apply to foreign correspondents.

Though officials continued to report relatively low casualty figures, conservative estimates placed the death toll in the four days of rioting at 200 persons.

Cong Talking Tough But Studying Plan

PARIS (AP) — United States Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge formally presented President Nixon's eight-point plan at the Vietnam peace talks today and said afterward that the other side gave every indication it would consider the plan.

Lodge talked to reporters after the 17th full-scale session of the talks at which both North Vietnam and the Viet Cong guerrillas' South Vietnam National Liberation Front denounced the Nixon proposals without rejecting them outright.

The U.S. chief delegate declined to say whether he thought progress was made, but he said: "The other side gave every indication they will consider these proposals."

Hanoi's chief negotiator in Paris, Xuan Thuy, told the weekly session that the plan is an attempt to conceal American intentions of continuing aggression in Vietnam.

Tran Buu Kiem, representative of the National Liberation Front, said the plan was not a proper response to the problem.

Thuy asserted that the United States is bent "on maintaining its absurd demands and is continuing to intensify the war."

He said Nixon's words could not camouflage the essential objectives of the United States—"to achieve neocolonialism in South Vietnam and perpetuate the partition of Vietnam."

U.S. FLEXIBLE

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge formally presented the Nixon plan as a formula which "can accommodate the various programs" put forward by the other side.

Lodge called for detailed discussions of both the Nixon plan and the 10-point plan submitted a week ago by the NLF. He quoted the president as saying the U.S. proposals were not offered on a take-it-or-leave-it basis.

The attack of the North Vietnamese and NLF representatives, however, made it clear that the two sides still were far apart on major issues—even thought the two new initiatives might get the talks off dead centre.

Pham Dang Lam, South Vietnam's representative, referred only briefly to the Nixon plan, saying that it "demonstrated the good will of the United States" and was "consistent with the spirit" of Saigon's basic position.

In opening the session, North Vietnam's Thuy spoke contem-

Negotiators Hold Air Canada Talks

MONTREAL (CP) — Union and company negotiators in the Air Canada strike met face to face today for the first time since talks were resumed Wednesday.

Federal mediators Bernard Wilson and William Kelly, along with Charles Eyre, chief negotiator for Air Canada, held a brief meeting with union representatives in the union's room in a downtown labor department office building.

All parties then broke for lunch and were expected to resume talks later in the day.

Negotiations involving the mediators continued after extended sessions Thursday that went on until 4 a.m. today.

B.C. Tel Accepts Conciliation Terms

B.C. Telephone Co. said today it is prepared to accept contract terms covering 6,600 employees recommended by a federal conciliation board.

Company president J. Ernest Richardson said the proposed wage increases would total $15 million over a two-year agreement and he added employees have been the highest-paid telephone workers in Canada.

The possibility of a rate increase loomed from his comment that "the reluctance on the part of the company to accept the . . . additional payroll costs stems partly from the knowledge that, at some point in time, growth in business will cease to generate the additional revenues required to meet these and other mounting costs."

A union spokesman said earlier this week that union negotiators will recommend to the membership that they reject the conciliation board's recommendations in a vote to be taken shortly.

Bargaining opened last October and the federal conciliation board was called in after negotiations were stalemated.

It's Warm on Venus—536 Above!

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet space ship Venus V reached the area of Venus today and sent down a capsule that radioed back information on the atmosphere during a 53-minute transmission, Tass news agency said.

Tass implied the instrument capsule reached the surface through the hot atmosphere, saying: "The station delivered to the surface of Venus a pennant with a bas relief of Lenin and the U.S.S.R. coat of arms."

Venus V dropped the capsule before entering the atmosphere. The capsule reported "a considerable growth of temperature" before its parachute system was released, Tass said.

"During the 53-minute-long descent on the parachute, the instruments on board the capsule measured the temperature, pressure and chemical composition of the atmosphere," the agency said.

The instrument capsule radioed that the atmosphere consisted mostly of carbon dioxide with temperatures running up to 536 degrees Farhenheit.

It seemed possible that the extreme heat melted parts of the Venus instrument capsule.

Jodrell Bank's radio observatory in England reported signals from the Venus V capsule lasted only 35 minutes.

"We don't know whether this is the end of the exercise or not," said Sir Bernard Lovell, head of the observatory. "But we will keep tracking as long as we can."

Lovell said the capsule from Russia's 1964 Venus spacecraft transmitted signals for 90 minutes.

"This time the capsule may have stopped higher up in the atmosphere or the rate of descent may have been faster," he said.

Shortly afterward, the Soviet news agency Tass announced that "the Soviet station Venus V softly descended in the atmosphere of Venus." It did not say whether it landed.

Jodrell Bank said the spacecraft entered the atmosphere of Venus seconds after 2 a.m. EDT. The craft's signal was lost for 20 minutes, then the big radio-telescope began picking up signals from the instrument capsule as it descended.

A twin spacecraft, Venus VI, is due to reach the planet Saturday morning. If both it and Venus V land their capsules successfully, two spaceships will be sending back scientific data on the mysteries of Venus simultaneously for the first time.

The Soviet Union made the first successful landing on Venus Oct. 18, 1964. That was done by Venus IV, and earlier Soviet Venus shots either missed the planet or crashed without sending back signals from the surface.

The last American Venus spaceship, Mariner V, passed close to the planet in 1967.

Baird Outburst Clouds The Real Issue—Mayor

Mayor Hugh Stephen today termed Ald. Robert Baird's latest outburst on "Cool-Aid" a deliberate attempt "to confuse the real issue."

The point at issue when Stephen and Baird clashed verbally in city hall corridors Thursday was not the proposed grant of money to "Cool-Aid," the mayor said.

"The grant to Cool Aid is a political decision which will be made in the council chamber," the mayor said. "The police commission (to which Baird wants to appeal) is not involved in that political decision and cannot be allowed to be involved.

"The issue here (between Stephen and Baird) is a much more serious one.

"The issue is: should confidential police reports be made use of at the political level?

"In the course of a year our police department investigates many thousands of incidents involving our citizens in varying circumstances, many of them distressing. If those investigations reveal that there are grounds for prosecution they become public knowledge by the way of court action.

"But in the great majority of cases this does not happen and the report remains a confidential document.

"If the respect we now have for our police force is to remain intact, if our confidence in the police force's role in a democracy is to remain, those confidential reports must not be violated.

"It is absolutely essential that such reports remain privileged and confidential.

"It is unthinkable to me that they should ever be useable by those at the political level. In my opinion such use of confidential police reports would mark the beginning of a Gestapo state. Over the years few citizens would remain free from fear."

Stephen added that because of his strong belief in the confidential nature of all pre-court police reports he found the use of one carefully selected report reprehensible.

NEVER

"For this reason this use of a police report by other than authorized members of the police force must never be allowed. And it never will be so long as I am mayor."

Stephen said that even as chairman of the police commission he never looked at such confidential documents unless they involved allegations against members of the force.

Stephen noted that in a democracy the operation of a police department was always carefully separated from the political process by the appointment of police commissions.

"Except for the right of an alderman to question the police chief in general terms, the police department must always remain separate from the political process," he said. "I intend to keep it that way — and in that decision I am sure that I shall receive overwhelming support from our citizens. I think that to the people of this city the thought of releasing police information for general consumption is repugnant."

TWO INCIDENTS

Baird has made great capital out of a confidential police report since the police department was asked to explain two incidents involving youth in the city.

Having obtained a copy of one of the reports Baird later distributed other copies to all city aldermen prior to open council debate.

During that debate he was warned by lawyer Ald. Ian Stewart and twice by the mayor that he was on dangerous ground in making public the information in his possession.

The report, which Baird insists is clear demonstration lack of responsibility on the part of "Cool-Aid" organizers, involved four city youths who "crashed" one of the "Cool-Aid" homes late one night.

The residents of the home called the police.

No charges were laid and it is understood that none of the youths involved belong to the "Cool-Aid" group.

putously of Nixon's insistence that the South Vietnamese people should have the right to determine their own destiny.

"The truth is," he said, "that for the past 15 years the government of the United States has never ceased to trample under foot the right of the South Vietnamese population of self-determination."

Kiem also stressed that the NLF had repeatedly rejected U.S. proposals for a mutual withdrawal of forces, but his statement was more moderate than that of Thuy.

Nixon "seeks at all costs to maintain his demand concerning the mutual withdrawal, a most absurd position which I have repeatedly rejected," Thuy said.

Turning to Nixon's proposals for a political settlement, he said the president had talked about "the free choice of the South Vietnamese population." But he said Nixon is concerned only "with a free choice of his own fashion."

REPEATS A DEMAND

Thuy's main emphasis, however, was on the question of troop withdrawals. He repeated the demand in the Viet Cong's peace plan for the complete and unconditional withdrawal of U.S. and all other non-Vietnamese troops.

The question of U.S. troops, he said, is one to be discussed between the United States and the Vietnamese people.

"The United States does not have the right to confuse this problem with problems to be discussed between the Vietnamese," he said, apparently referring to North Vietnamese forces in South Vietnam.

The negotiators met today for the first time with concrete proposals before them. There was expectation on the U.S. side of real bargaining.

Victoria was born on May 24, 1819, and came to the throne when she was 18.

"Her's was a romantic reign and great things were achieved during her time. Her judgment was as simple as her vision. Things for her were either right or wrong.

"This lovely city of Victoria was named after her and we are proud of it."

●

The ceremonies began with a fanfare of trumpets announcing the march of the IODE standard bearers to the tune of Elgar's Land of Hope and Glory.

After the standard bearers had formed up in front of the lieutenant-governor, all children joined in the singing of O Canada, Land Of Our Birth and O God Our Help in Ages Past.

Prayers were offered by Rev. Dr. Samuel Parsons, executive secretary of Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

After the ceremony, flowers were placed at the base of Queen Victoria's statue on behalf of all Victoria school children. The yougsters then joined in a parade along Belleville and across Government Street to Thunderbird Park.

The massed chior was conducted by Harry Bigsby, director of music for Victoria schools.

J. E. Bryant conducted Esquimalt Junior Secondary School Band; marshals were W. J. Orchard, W. J. Kitley and J. A. Crowther.

FAMED TOWER 80 YEARS OLD

PARIS (AP) — The Eiffel Tower, regarded by many Frenchmen as one of the ugliest structures in the world, was 80 years old Thursday.

Managed by an Eiffel who is as old as the tower, it pays 22 per cent dividends to its stockholders.

Running the show from an office in the tower's base is Rene Legrain-Eiffel, grandson of Gustave Eiffel — real name Gustave Boenickhausen — who dreamed it up.

The first visitors were admitted May 15, 1889.

TEL AVIV (AP) — Heavy fighting between Jordanian and Israeli troops broke out today near three major bridges spanning the Jordan River.

The Israelis said one of their soldiers was killed and two others were wounded. An army announcement said the casualties occurred when their troops came under mortar fire near Mandassay bridge, 10 miles north of the Dead Sea.

The Israeli army said Jordanians later opened tank and artillery fire on Irsaelis dug in near the Allenby and Daniya bridges. The army said there were no Israeli casualties in the second engagement.

$410,000 Bid Approved For Property

Victoria's finance committee Thursday approved a bid of $410,000 for the old Mountain View Home property at Cadboro Bay Road and Bowker.

The bid still requires acceptance by full city council.

Although city owned, the property lies within the municipal boundaries of Oak Bay.

High bidder for the property was Park Pacific Apartments Limited which is proposing to construct a 180-unit four-storey apartment on the site.

City manager Dennis Young told the committee that the apartment design had been generally approved by city planner Geoff Greenhalgh.

"It has to be understood, of course, that the ultimate decision as to what is constructed there rests with Oak Bay council," he said. "But when we called for bids for the property we insisted that a design of the project must be submitted along with the bid. Greenhalgh informs me that the design is excellent and the reputation of the company very high."

'THROWN A CURVE'

Wednesday the company made its first bid for rezoning of the property to permit apartment construction.

Following the meeting one of the principals complained that the Oak Bay rezoning committee had "thrown a curve at us" by insisting on stringent parking regulations.

The developers had provided one parking space for each of the 180 suites. Oak Bay is insisting that the undercover parking be increased by at least 50 per cent.

Young referred to the hold-up as minor when he unveiled the plans for Victoria's finance committee.

"They have provided undercover parking for 180 cars," he said. "Oak Bay is asking for a 50 per cent increase. In the city we insist on 125 per cent parking spaces for apartments and I think the developers and Oak Bay may reach that as a compromise."

A second apartment zoning application was heard by the Oak Bay group Wednesday.

It came from Isherwood and Johnston who wish to construct a 63-suite apartment at 1558 Beach Drive.

Total cost of the two projects is estimated at $3.7 million. The 180-suite project, one of the largest in the area, will cost $2.7 million.

Birdshot Fired at Rioters

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — National Guards troops stood on alert in staging areas near a University of California parkland today in the wake of a battle between police, hippie squatters, students and others in which 50 persons were injured.

The hippies, claiming use of the land as a "people's park," resisted police ouster attempts Thursday with a barrage of rocks. Police fired into the crowd with tear-gas shells and shotguns loaded with birdshot.

An automobile was overturned and burned. Police were bombarded with missiles thrown from roofs. Three were injured, one with a knife wound in the chest.

Many in the crowd were peppered with the tiny birdshot pellets from police shotguns, which drew blood without inflicting serious wounds.

Police finally quelled the outbreak after cordoning off 18 square blocks and arresting 45 persons.

CALLS ISSUE PHONEY

Asserting the park protest was "a phony issue," Gov. Ronald Reagan called out the guardsmen and ordered a ban on loitering between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. either in the city or on the university campus.

The number of troops sent to the scene was described only as "substantial."

The trouble started earlier this month after the university announced plans to use its parkland for an athletic field and posted no-transpassing signs. Hippies who had frequented the area grabbed the signs and burned them.

On Wednesday, police routed 75 persons from the property and workmen started fencing it in the following day.

The hippies tried to prevent erection of the eight-foot fence and were joined soon by students and others as the crowd grew to hundreds.

Lime Rock Deposit Sought

BAMBERTON — Connors Drilling Co. of Vancouver is continuing on a contract basis their experimental drilling for lime rock which possibly could become a future quarry to supply Ocean Cement Ltd., a company spokesman said Thursday.

The spokesman said drilling tests at Harris Creek, 35 miles west of here, are "exploratory only" and it will be about four months before tests are complete and final results recorded.

Ocean Cement currently uses about 3,000 tons of lime rock a day which now is supplied from a quarry located on Thain Road in Cobble Hill.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Contrary to traditional beliefs of decades gone by, beasts of farm and forest are no more successful than men in predicting the weather of the coming seasons. The lower animals do, however, have some talent for forecasting weather at short range—like what the weather will be tonight or tomorrow.

The European tree frog, or tree toad, at one time was much used in Switzerland and Germany by householders to predict the weather. The little creature was kept in a glass jar half-filled with water. A little ladder also was placed inside. It extended from the bottom of the jar to the top edge.

When the frog or toad) climbed the ladder, he was supposed to be prophesying that the weather would be better. The higher he climed, the nicer the approaching weather would be. The only trouble with the custom was that some "authorities" believed just the opposite: that the higher the climb, the worse the weather on the way.

Kierans Under Heated Attack

Tories, NDP Fire Criticism Over Postal Services, Rates

OTTAWA (CP)—Postmaster-General Eric Kierans and the government came under a scathing opposition attack on postal services Thursday and then easily voted down two non-confidence motions on the issue.

The motions, made under new Commons rules that allow the opposition to initiate such debates, were introduced by Conservative and NDP members.

Today the House debated the controversial Official Languages Act.

Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough) introduced a motion accusing the government of mismanagement of postal services, imposing a steadily-deteriorating service at higher cost and allowing employee morale to decline.

His motion went down 99 to 67 with 50 Conservatives, 13 New Democrats and four Creditiste MPs combining against the government.

An NDP amendment—defeated by an identical vote—criticized higher postal rates for their threat to continuance of non-profit religious, labor, farm and co-operative publications. Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre) introduced the amendment.

Commons standing: Liberals 154, Conservatives 72, NDP 23, Creditiste 14, Independent 1.

House Dwindles Below Quorum

Despite the steam in opposition criticism of Mr. Kierans' department, Commons attendance dwindled at one point to less than the 20-member quorum. Nobody drew the fact to the Speaker's attention.

The opposition directed fire at closing of several hundred small, rural post offices in their ridings, questioning the wisdom of such minor economies in the face of the resulting inconvenience.

Mr. Macquarrie led off the attack on what he called more-expensive, less-efficient postal service.

"It is not just good enough to charge more for mail service than ever before and then to provide the worst service the public has ever known.

The last 10 months had seen "one major postal strike, partial strikes, near-strikes, disruption, lowered morale." Cost of stamps, mail boxes, keys and money orders had risen and there had been a "drastic increase in subscription rates on newspapers."

Mr. Kierans had spoken of the many studies under way in his department but no such investigations were needed "to know that things are bad and getting worse."

'Do-Nothing' Tory Years Blamed

In rebuttal, Mr. Kierans said there are problems but they result from years of neglect—"five do-nothing Conservative years." In that period the budget for management training was $15,000 or 35 cents per man for the 41,000 employees.

Neglect and irresponsibility in the past had led to the labor unrest and "a legacy of suspicion." The post office deficit would have been $500,000,000 annually by 1975 if the rates had not been increased.

Personnel administration was one of the department's most serious problems and it was under study.

Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington) said of the minister's criticism of the former Conservative government's postal policies: "Under the untrained men we apparently had, we got next-day delivery."

He urged, as did other MPs, a return to the six-day home delivery week. No country except Canada had tried delivering a week's mail in five days.

Balloons Explode

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (Reuters) — Three actors were in a hospital Thursday with first- and second-degree burns after 400 hydrogen balloons exploded in their faces. The three were driving slowly through the city Wednesday with the balloons publicizing the shooting off their film Los Fantastico's when a man approached and held a match to one of the balloons.

Briton Seeks Support To Preserve Monarchy

TORONTO (CP)—Lt.-Col. J. C. Du Parc Braham arrived in Canada from Britain Thursday to rally more Canadian support for the preservation of the monarchy.

Colonel Braham, leader of The Monarchist League, which claims a worldwide membership of 12,000, said in an interview he has facts that show 57 per cent of Canadians are loyal to the Queen.

"What is happening all over this country is that people are individually expressing their loyalty but they need something to catalize them, possibly a Canadian branch of the Monarchist League," he said.

He suggested that to make the monarchy more meaningful to Canadians, there should be a permanent home in Ottawa where the Queen would take up residence for three months in every three years.

Viet War Takes Heavy Plane Toll

SAIGON (CP) — The United States Command announced today that 48 American helicopters and planes were lost in Vietnam during the last week. It was one of the highest aircraft tolls in the eight years and five months that the United States has been fighting in the Southeast Asian war.

The losses raised to 5,346 the number of American aircraft shot down, destroyed on the ground by rocket, mortar and ground attacks, or lost due to operational failures during the war.

In the year since the peace talks began in Paris on May 13, 1968, the United States has lost 1,557 aircraft, or roughly one-third of the number lost in the previous seven years.

The 5,346 aircraft lost are estimated to have cost between $5,000,000,000 and $6,000,000,000.

Of the total losses, 2,698 were fixed-wing planes and 2,648 were helicopters.

The U.S. Command could offer no immediate explanation for the mounting aircraft losses.

Three of the helicopters were shot down Thursday in various parts of the country. One American was killed and four were wounded.

American troops killed 74 North Vietnamese soldiers in a two-hour battle in mountainous jungle two miles from the Laotian border, a United States military spokesman said today.

He said one American was killed and 47 were wounded in the clash Thursday about 30 miles southwest of the former imperial capital of Hue.

The American troops were part of a huge airborne force sent to the area to try to seal off movements of the North Vietnamese, bringing supplies from Laos into the strategic A Shou valley.

Canada-China Talks Open Next Week

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — The first substantive talks between Canada and China on mutual diplomatic recognition probably will not start before next week, sources close to the Canadian embassy said today.

Neither the Chinese nor Canadian embassies would comment officially on press reports that the talks would start today.

Mitchell Sharp, Canadian minister for external affairs, has instructed his embassy to observe strict silence on the Chinese contacts.

But sources said the Canadians are awaiting the arrival from Ottawa of Far East expert John Fraser before meetings at the Chinese embassy started.

Fraser and Canadian Ambassador Arthur Andrew, official head of the Canadian delegation, will be supported by an embassy councillor who speaks fluent Mandarin Chinese.

The chief Chinese negotiator in the opening stages is expected to be commercial attache Liu Chi-tsai, currently in charge of the embassy.

However, Sharp, who will pay an official visit to Sweden next month, has said he expects higher-level reinforcement from Peking.

Mao, Lin in Command But Pot Shots Continue

By FORREST EDWARDS

HONG KONG (AP) — Underground broadcasts from inside China indicate that the power struggle is far from over.

The broadcasts are attacking Defence Minister Lin Piao, officially designated chief aide and heir to party Chairman Mao Tse-tung at the ninth Communist party congress last month.

Western government analysts in Hong Kong view the attacks as attempts by enemies of Lin Piao and Mao to create dissension between Lin, an army man, and leaders of the navy and air force. They say Lin has many enemies, particularly in the military, who are trying to pull him down.

Reports of the broadcasts come from seamen who have heard them along the coast, from travellers returning from the mainland and from Chinese in Hong Kong who have relatives on the mainland.

One such broadcast was heard in Hong Kong last July, but whether it came from an underground resistance station or a propaganda station operated by the Chinese Nationalists never was established.

Since late April, seamen off the coast of Shangtung province have heard a station called intermittently the Voice of Saving the Country and Saving the People. One such broadcast said Lin Piao "has seized power and Chairman Mao must be rescued from the arch plotter Lin Piao."

Although a number of Western analysts here believe that Lin Piao is the driving force in China, or is fast becoming that, they don't see Mao as his political prisoner. Instead they regard Mao as a semi-retired elder who sets the policy line and lets Lin Piao carry it out.

In contrast with this view, a large number of Chinese observers, editorial writers and commentators insist that mainland sources tell them Mao has been victimized by Lin and is a virtual political prisoner. They say other military men, most likely in the air force and navy, are behind the attacks on Lin Piao, a former army officer.

Despite the disagreement, both the Western analysts and the Hong Kong Chinese agree the number of reports about broadcasts and the similar details indicate the power struggle is far from over.

There are indications, also, that broadcasts are not the only weapon. Travellers from the mainland tell of small cleverly-worded pamphlets attacking Lin or Lin and Mao that are circulated from hand to hand.

The analysts agree, however, that for the time being there is less chaos in China than existed during the height of the Cultural Revolution. Chinese coming from the mainland say the opposition to Mao and to Lin has gone underground.

Showdown Coming

PRIME MINISTER TRUDEAU'S occasional announcements and off-the-cuff remarks have gradually built up a backlog of pending developments which present a forest of question marks to most Canadians. From major issues such as foreign policy and defence policy to much lesser matters there is a broad field of national problems for which the country awaits promised solutions.

Mr. Trudeau's recent declaration of intent to effect drastic economies in the shared-cost programs has added another engrossing query to the list. Some of the veil in regard to this question may be lifted next month when Finance Minister Benson delivers his report. But Mr. Trudeau's warning was clear: a good many toes apparently will be stepped on, and "vested interests" in particular may expect to feel the edge of the economy axe.

One of the difficulties into which the federal government has got itself is the largely unpredictable and uncontrollable extent of the growth which some commitments may undergo. It is one thing to say that a federal grant of so many dollars will be made. It is quite another matter to undertake to provide matching grants and percentage grants on the basis of provincial expenditures, to agree to furnish funds on a sliding scale which has no definite top limit. It is in such a squeeze that the federal government increasingly finds itself. And it is from this sort of dilemma that Mr. Trudeau now intends to free his administration.

Much of this field is related to social welfare and assistance programs. To alter them in any way—except to increase them—is bound to raise protests from one end of the country to the other. The family allowance has been mentioned as a possible point of reform. Insofar as a cutback merely eliminated non-needy families from the grants there might be a minimum of disagreement — few well-to-do recipients would wage a fight to remain on the list. But establishment of the dividing line would be certain to arouse controversy, and the means test has long been a political and social bugaboo in this country.

Social measures tend to become deeply embedded in the national structure very rapidly once they are initiated. Hence any attempts to tamper with already established pensions, medicare, grants for this or that federal-provincial project, will be greeted with storms. The reception of the government's cancellation of the winter work plan—an indefensible program the way it was being implemented—was a measure of what could be expected for wider-ranging efforts at economy.

But economy there must be, if federal deficits and their effects on the nation's business are not to become even more serious. What appears to be shaping up, then, is a gigantic test not only of Mr. Trudeau's ability to find acceptable ways in which to cut federal expenditures, but also of his ability to persuade the country that they are both necessary and feasible. If he can achieve this without losing both his public office and his personal popularity he will have passed the supreme test of Trudeaumania's strength.

Now Hear This

IT IS GETTING NOISIER. A recent symposium on "noise pollution" sponsored by the American Medical Association found that environmental noise has doubled in intensity every decade. And now heavier air traffic and the prospect of supersonic planes with their deafening sonic booms means the uproar is building at an even faster pace and may soon reach a crescendo. The time has come to apply more silencers.

The purpose of the AMA meeting was to emphasize how excessive noise can be injurious to our psychological and physiological well-being and a serious occupational hazard. The same concern was expressed by the World Health Organization when it marked World Health Day last month by dealing with the theme of "health, labour and productivity." WHO concluded that "the problem of noise is still far from receiving the attention it deserves." Noisy surroundings, a WHO publication declares, "create anxiety, irritability and fatigue . . . and can bring about temporary changes in many activities of the body, including the central nervous system and the stomach."

While the problem is most acute in heavily industrialized North America, few countries in the world enjoy silence. But most are lagging in enforcing control measures, even though it is technically possible to reduce or eliminate loud noise efficiently at a relatively low cost. For industry, sound suppression is a good investment. Efficiency studies show that noise cuts into production.

In the public sphere governments must be prepared to enact stronger legislation to curb noise, and to spend more money on research and control. The AMA pointed out that last year the U.S. federal administration spent only $1 million on the problem, a small sum by today's government standards. The health of society is at stake. We should be prepared to spend accordingly.

Another Accolade

TWO MONTHS AGO THE STUDENTS of the University of Victoria staged a demonstration — a prolonged ovation in appreciation of their acting president, Dean Robert Wallace. The occasion marked a happy contrast to the less harmonious displays of emotion by students toward administrative leaders in many other universities on this continent and elsewhere.

This week the university's Alumni Association complemented the undergraduate tribute by conferring on Dean Wallace their special award for extraordinary contribution to university education. It is given only when someone is adjudged particularly worthy of the honor.

The two incidents will remain happy memories for a man whose unselfish and conscientious service to his university has won the wide approval of everyone familiar with his work over many years. When he turns over direction to the new president, Dr. Bruce Partridge, he will have ample evidence of gratitude for a difficult job well done.

Hazards Edging Up

DURING THE FIRST TWO weeks of the fire season only one serious outbreak occurred in the Vancouver district, which includes the Island. But up to yesterday, 233 blazes had been recorded for the entire province—about half of them in the Kamloops area — and estimated fire-fighting costs reached $80,000.

The figures are not startling in themselves, but they provide a needed reminder of the hazard which can be expected to mount in the days ahead. In this locality, warm weather last week started the drying process in the woods. Increasing caution must be the watchword from now until the end of summer.

Ontario Looks at Municipal Income Tax

Greer

SOME rather casual remarks at a press conference by Premier Robarts about the municipal tax crisis have led to some careless reports that the Ontario government is thinking of giving the municipalities authority to introduce their income taxes. Since Mr. Robarts was clearly kite-flying at the time, this interpretation probably does not bother him unduly. The municipal revenue problem is so bad that any solution may be worth at least political exploration. But what in fact Mr. Robarts said was this while talking about the province's financial grants to the municipalities:

"We will have to find additional sources of revenue for the municipalities, where they will be able to tax themselves in order to relieve the burden on real estate and have the responsibility of raising the taxes as well as spending them.

"I don't like the grant system any more, vis a vis the province and the municipalities, than I do between the province and the federal government, and I think we'll practice what we preach in due course . . .

"What I am saying is that, flowing from the Smith Committee report and some of their recommendations, we will be looking at other methods by which we could put revenue into the hands of the municipalities.

"This is simply a question of taking sources of revenue that presently exist and directing some of it, instead of having it flowing into the central government then having it passed back, let it flow directly from the taxpayer to our municipalities . . . You can think in terms of revenue from the sale of liquor, sales tax, almost any one of our taxes. This is the type of thing we are looking at."

Misunderstood

While this is hardly a model of clarity, it is clear enough that Mr. Robarts did not say, as some reports had him saying, that Ontario is planning to cut off all provincial grants and replace them with municipal income taxes.

But just what Mr. Robarts has in mind is more difficult to comprehend. Understandably perhaps, in view of the nebulous state of the government's initial thinking, he seems to be talking at cross purposes and mixing up his basic principles.

One principle Mr. Robarts asserted was fiscal responsibility — the government which spends the money should also raise the taxes and vice versa. Grants from one level of government, either federal-provincial or provincial-municipal, are inherently bad, he declares, because they tend to vitiate this principle.

The Smith Committee — a Royal Commission which spent five years examining Ontario's tax structure — did indeed have a great deal to say on this point in its report, particularly as regards local autonomy.

"Local governments must be granted taxing powers consistent with their responsibilities," the committee said. "If, to achieve fiscal responsibility, local governments are to be required to finance their discretionary expenditures, they must not be denied the power to raise the revenues necessary to finance these ependitures."

Unrewarding Search

But 500 pages later the committee found itself reporting: "We have sifted every non-property tax or revenue sources that could conceivably be placed in local hands. To our disappointment, this exercise yielded mainly negative results."

The committee was able to come up with only two sources of fresh municipal money which "could possibly be advocated on theoretical and practical grounds," and then only if regional government is implemented throughout the province. One was a local tax on motor vehicles, the revenue from which would not be very great, and the other was a municipal income tax.

Such a tax, in the form of a flat levy on wages, salaries and the profits of unincorporated businesses, is used in a number of U.S. cities, and the committee was impressed by its revenue potential. Philadelphia, for example, raises 30 per cent of its money by such a tax. In Metropolitan Toronto, the committee estimated that a municipal levy on incomes of one and one-half per cent in 1965 would have raised $54 million.

But it concluded it would be "folly" to introduce such a tax in Ontario now. Only the very largest municipalities would be able to create the necessary administration, which would hardly be equitable. Even with large regional governments, the committee had considerable doubts about the advisability of introducing municipal income taxes.

Redirecting Revenues

In any event, Mr. Robarts' comments would indicate that he is not thinking, as yet at any rate, along these lines. He is clearly talking about redirecting or sharing provincial revenues with the municipalities, rather than creating new tax fields for their cultivation, and there is a big difference between the two.

Tax sharing is simply the present grant system by another name. Turning over some of the liquor revenue or the sales tax revenue to the municipalities becomes, unless local governments are themselves given power to levy in these fields, another provincial grant program, which Mr. Robarts says he is trying to get away from. The net effect would be to make the municipalities more dependent on the provincial treasury and less autonomous and less responsible to the taxpayers than before.

Big Qualification

The same would be true, as the Smith Committee noted, of any municipal sharing of the provincial income tax — but with one big qualification. The committee considered this question in the context of the current federal-provincial arrangement whereby Ottawa collects Ontario's income tax. Since it would not be possible to have varying municipal rates under this arrangement, the province would have to set a uniform rate for all municipalities, which the committee said would be just another form of provincial grant.

But the committee did not consider how it might work if Ontario had its own income tax system — a policy it rejected but one which the government has since avowed. In such case, municipal income taxes, credited against the provincial tax as is now done federally-provincially, would be quite feasible. Mr. Robarts may not be thinking along these lines as yet but he could end up there.

Fairly Fluent

Bilingue — "Faculte de parler et de comprendre deux idiomes differents," (Dictionnaire General de la Langue, Francaise au Canada, — Belisle, — Quebec).

-- "Qui parle, possede parfaitement deux langues," (Robert: Societe de Nouveau Lettre, Paris).

Bi-lingual — "Able to speak one's native language and another with approximately equal facility," (Random House Dictionary, New York).

As the government brings the new Official Languages Bill before the House of Commons, and there seems to be every indication that some appointments in the Civil Service, the Armed Forces and other federal agencies, will depend on a bilingual qualification, it is essential that the term "bilingual" is clearly defined. The above definitions are from two recent editions of French dictionaries, published in Quebec and in Paris. Three contemporary English dictionaries mention, or infer, equal facility, or fluency in both languages.

Complete fluency in both official languages will not be easy to find in this country; we must accept a degree of difficulty with idioms, the construction of sentences, and some grammatical errors in that language which is not our native tongue.

Proficiency must be based on a standard, clearly defined ability to communicate regardless of the mother tongue of the individual.

Perhaps the most important aspect of the problem is forbearance and sympathy to someone who is seeking assistance, advice or direction in that official language which is not his mother tongue. — J. W. Ritchie, 2796 Burdick.

One Side Only

According to report, widening of Shelbourne Street will necessitate cutting down trees that were planted there as a memorial following the First World War.

From which side should the trees be removed? On the west they have grown into fine, stately trees offering shade and seclusion — a process that has taken 50 years. On the east side, because of pruning to avoid wires and cables, they are less majestic. If they have to be removed, let it be from the east side only.

We must show care lest we suffer the fate of Los Angeles which, at one time, was an attractive, smog-free city with many amenities that have been destroyed. — A. B. Randy, 3318 Oak.

PARIS

Then Presto! And No Giant

By TIM TRAYNOR

Traynor

PARIS as it was over the past few weeks would have delighted any surrealist, sensitive to the fantasies which transmute the humdrum facade of everyday life. At the turning of the corner, or in a snatch of conversation, there would be a momentary suggestion of distant explosions, roaring crowds, rumbling tanks. Abruptly, the illusion would pass, leaving a sense of eerie calm. The departure of General de Gaulle stimulated the nation's collective memory of repression, rebellion, armed confrontation. Frenchmen thought of 1940; death and collapse, Gen. de Gaulle promising to fight on regardless. Thoughts turned, too, to 1958; Algerian terror and a mutinous army; Gen. de Gaulle stepping in to avert civil war.

Gen. de Gaulle was inseparable from these traumas; indeed, he enfolded himself in them, the better to project his potency and awesomeness. The country had for a time been under his spell, but gradually there had emerged a desire to put past images to rest, to embrace the present, however prosaic it might be.

The images evoked by Gen. de Gaulle's going were nonetheless vivid; all the more so for being utterly out of keeping with actuality. Whatever recollections hung in the Paris air, the city went determinedly about its business, resolutely turning its attention to the general's replacement.

The atmosphere of the Champs Elysees was workaday and brisk; children and couples dotted the gardens of the Tuileries, the entertainments and liaisons of Montmartre went on as usual. It was usual to see a group of riot police playing cards in their van, parked incongruously amid the 17th century streets of the Ile St. Louis, where Gen. de Gaulle's would-be successor, Georges Pompidou, maintains a noble and secluded apartment.

Clashes between students and police were isolated and there was little more than effervescence in the Latin Quarter.

Magically Erased

Meantime, the great man had magically erased himself, stripping the presidential palace of his possessions overnight and removing to his country retreat at Colombey - les - deux - Eglises. Even his coolest opponents must have been startled, for he bestrode the nation until almost the end. Only a few months before, in Brittany, he had given one of his inimitable virtuoso performances as father-figure and political colossus. A giant of a man, he had stood in the main square of Quimper and rolled out majestic phrases with an air of absolute authority. He spoke as the repository of all French wisdom, and he seemed to be drawing directly from this in proposing administrative regionalization and constitutional reform.

As the subsequent rejection of these proposals was to show, the country had ceased to accept this sort of presentation automatically, but there could be no doubt of its forcefulness as it was delivered on that sunny afternoon. There was, too, an intense emotional bond with old companions-in-arms in the square, to whom the general gave a moving acknowledgment, recalling Brittany's leading role in the resistance

The great man's visions were, it would seem, being undermined at that very moment. It seems appropriate, in retrospect, that he referred obliquely to his grand concept of aligning France and Quebec. His famous manifesto on Quebec, once so explosive, looks more and more like an historical curiosity.

Quebec Theme

"By what can only be called a minor miracle of vitality, energy and loyalty, the fact is that a French nation — a piece of our people — is manifesting itself today in Canada and claiming the right to be recognized and treated as such . . . For generations, these people of peasant stock, humble farming folk, multiplied magnificently to withstand the rising tide of the invaders. At the cost of unparalleled efforts, around their poor priests, with 'Je me souviens' for their motto, they struggled on and succeeded in keeping their French language, traditions, religion and solidarity. But now, they are no longer content with this passive defensive and they mean to become masters of their own destiny, like any other people;

"Indeed, what is at stake is that Quebec should be free. At the point where things stand in the irreversible situation demonstrated and accelerated by public feeling at the time of my visit, it is obvious that the national movement of the Canadian French, together with the peace and balance of Canada as a whole, the future of our country's relations with the other communities of that vast territory and even the world's now enlightened conscience — all this requires that the question be solved.

"This involves two conditions. The first entails a complete change of the present Canadian structure resulting from the Act granted by the Queen of England a hundred years ago, which created the 'Federation.' In my view, this will inevitably lead to Quebec's accession to the rank of a sovereign state in control of its national existence, as are so many other peoples and states throughout the world, even though they are not so valid or even so populated as this one would be . . . The second condition on which the solution to this great problem depends is that the French community's solidarity on both sides of the Atlantic be organized."

Swedes Streamlining The Antique Family

By KARL E. MEYER

STOCKHOLM — The Swedes have had a permissive society for so long that they are bored with the subject, and are frankly annoyed by the undue interest the rest of the world so persistently takes in sex and sin in Sweden. They have a point.

Most foreign attention has centered on such things as nudity in films, the sale of contraceptives in nickle-plated vending machines, and the supposedly lubricious behavior of Swedish youth. Yet the truly interesting thing in Sweden is not what is being done outside marriage — it is what is being done to marriage itself.

With characteristic logic and determination, the Swedes are streamlining that most sacrosanct of antiques, the family.

Why, for example, should men be denied the pleasure of housework? Is there any real virtue in mother-love, in tiny families, or should infants be sent to collective nurseries?

Or — to ask the most extreme question — why shouldn't five or six couples form a group marriage?

It is a fascinating debate, and may have more impact on the rest of the world than Sweden's much-publicized decision to recognize Hanoi.

Meet some Swedes who are involved in the debate.

•

Rune Liljekvist is a housewife, as he has been for three years, taking care of his 6-year-old daughter, Osa, while his wife, Ola, works during the day as a layout editor of a weekly called "My Word."

In Swedish Liljekvist is a "hemmafru" or ordinary housewife. He is that new Swedish phenomenon — the emancipated man.

Is he embarrassed by his role as a house father? "No, not at all," says Rune, "but I live in a rural suburb and some of my neighbors find it strange that I do all the family shopping."

He is a writer, and for a year did a column for a woman's magazine. He has been married for seven years. He is, in his own words, "extremely happy."

A more radical innovator is Ingrid, a comely blonde in her early 20s, who is involved in a group marriage. She lives in the otherwise staid Lidingo district of Stockholm with 11 other people, one child, two dogs and a turtle. The six couples share everything in common, save for toothbrushes and pills.

•

The idea originated last fall, and the couples (one of which is married) made their compact at Christmas and rented a 12-room house in January, their landlord being a Swedish film producer.

They are all zealous revolutionaries — Ingrid wears a Mao button on her neat black dress — and they form one of at least three group marriages in Stockholm.

There are problems. Ingrid said the most serious was ideological argument within "the collective," as they call themselves. Five of the group work, and the others are students.

The ages range from 22 to 27, one of the men is an American deserter, but all the rest are from middle-class Swedish homes. Parents have been understanding, more so than youthful contemporaries, Ingrid reports.

Not to put too fine a point on it, how do they decide who sleeps with whom?

"Well, we are very open in our conversations," explains Ingrid.

•

"We simply express our wishes to each other. We try to avoid any exclusive pairing, though for a short time it is all right."

Will children have a collective father and mother? The matter is under discussion. The only child now is the daughter of the one married couple, and she divides her time between grand-parents and her plural family.

Let it be triply underlined that neither Rune nor Ingrid is typical in Sweden, yet each in a different way reflects a widespread revolt against the idea of the isolated family in which father works and mother spends full-time caring for a single child—only 15 per cent of the families in Stockholm have two or more children.

The government itself is encouraging the revolt. It approved a 1968 report to the United Nations on the status of women in Sweden, which argued for "male emancipation," meaning the right of a husband to remain at home when children are small and the wife is working.

•

This idea, the report says, is supported by psychological studies showing that masculine identification of growing boys "may become uncertain in a one-sided, mother-dominated home environment."

One remedy, Swedes believe, is the all-day nursery in which children can be cared for from the age of 6 months.

The number of these nurseries has doubled in the last three years, and there are now 32,000 full-day places for children of working mothers.

A second remedy is the collective service apartment, where everything from child-care to cooking is done on a group basis. Fifteen collective apartments already exist in Sweden, and dozens more are planned.

Both innovations are firmly supported by Camilla Odhnoff, Sweden's minister of home affairs, herself the mother of four.

The isolated family, Mrs. Odhnoff believes, is not only wasteful but denies the child the contact it needs with others. Thus by developing all-day nurseries and collective apartments, Sweden can both release the mother for productive work and restore the required contact among children.

Most Swedes under 35 accept the general validity of this argument. They have also come to accept some startling redefinitions of sexual roles in order to give fuller equality to women.

In 1965, for example, "Dagens Nyheter," the leading morning paper in Stockholm, announced that it would henceforth call all mature women "Mrs." whether or not they were married.

•

The editor explained that it was an "insult" to women in a male-dominated society that it distinguished between married and unmarried women, but not men.

In fact, in Sweden the campaign for total emancipation of women can be dated to 1961, when two women with kinetic polemical ability attacked the central citadels of male supremacy.

The first was Kristina Ahlmark-Michanek, whose book "Belief in Virginity and the Double Standard" argued frankly that there is no equality for women so long as men are given more freedom in sexual behavior.

She argued vehemently against the prevailing Swedish belief — then thought to be very liberal — that sexual relations without marriage were all right if the couple loved one another. Friendship was enough, she rebutted.

The second was Eva Moberg, another journalist and daughter of Sweden's most famous novelist, who decried the notion that simply because women were child-bearers they should be given the principal responsibility for child-rearing.

•

"Mother love is history's most exploited emotion," she wrote sharply in her nicely entitled essay, "The Probation of Women."

A third and even more radical feminist joined the debate four years later with an article ironically called "The Holy Family," published on Christmas Eve in Dagens Nyheter. Barbro Backberger, a social scientist, observed scathingly that the family is "our most intolerant group." She continued:

"Married couples spy on each other, discourage each other's interests and experience . . . parents cling to their children, prevent them from taking steps toward life, towards friends and their own interests. The children use their parents' fear of losing them to blackmail them."

This triple onslaught scandalized some Swedes, but impressed far more. It is fair to say that nowhere in the west is the traditional concept of the family under more critical scrutiny than in Sweden.

Candy Gives Moral Lesson

Sweden Now

When Ewa Aulin, who plays the sexy star of the movie "Candy," lunched with American columnist Charlie Rice, he unexpectedly received a lecture on—morals.

"Ewa is a delightfully well-mannered 18-year-old who speaks four languages perfectly," he reported in This Week magazine. And relates her conversation like this:

"Mr. Rice," she said politely but firmly, "I'm getting a little tired of people being shocked by Sweden because of its nudity and free love. I'm beginning to think it's the rest of the world that is shocking.

"For instance, before I left Sweden, I had never seen a poor person—I mean anyone in real need . . . The slums of Paris broke my heart. And New York wasn't much better."

★ ★ ★

Mr. Rice dragged out the routine reply: "What about Sweden's high suicide rate? And its high alcoholic rate?"

"It's true they are problems," she said. "But our suicide rate isn't much higher than yours. And we do have alcoholics, but the average American drinks three times as much as the average Swede. Your homicide rate is ten times as high as ours."

Ewa was also shocked by policemen who carry guns. "In Sweden, policemen are hired to help people, not shoot them."

Nor could she understand why young people must pay money to go to college, or why anybody should pay for hospital care.

"It is like saying, if you wish to continue with your education, you will be fined; if you get sick, you will be punished."

Keen Sense of Justice

New Statesman

The new Swedish concern for the wrongs of the whole world — Vietnam, Biafra, the American Negro — is something which it is easy enough to jeer at: the "haves" feeling guilty about the misfortunes of the "have nots."

But it would be wrong to interpret it entirely in this way. Sweden has always been a country with a keen sense of justice and now this feeling is beginning to extend itself.

A young artist, one of the most successful in Sweden, said recently: "How can I conscientiously teach my students the elements of design, when there is so much which is wrong with the world? They, and I, ought to be doing something about that."

The widespread Swedish custom of sending teen-agers off to travel round Europe and fend for themselves has produced a new cosmopolitanism.

It is the political pressure exercised by the young which keeps the door open to political refugees in Sweden.

In a 'Sane Asylum' by Sea Thoughtful Men Seek Answers

By COLMAN McCARTHY

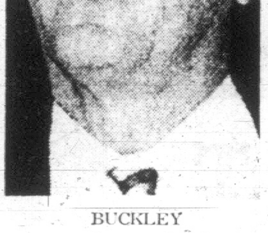
SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — A few miles up a path-lip of road that looks out between restful palms and eucalypti to the Pacific and east to the lumbersome Santa Ynez mountains, still gasping from their struggles with the spring floods, is the Centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

Called a think tank, a mind lab, a dreamer's refuge, an egghead monastery, scorned by the extreme right and left and ignored by the extreme middle, the stucco low-slung building that houses the 21 Fellows of the Centre is essentially a sane asylum: A place of solitude where men whose minds are still intact can ponder and discuss the currently best-selling question in America, What the hell is going on?

The father abbot of the centre is Robert M. Hutchins. At age 29, he was dean of the Yale Law School, and at 30 he became president of the University of Chicago.

Unsettling Process

Tall, straight and now 70, with a warm and cheerful heart that will endure hundreds of bores just to sift out the occasional saint or poet that may turn up, a teacher, writer, stylist, a listener, Hutchins helped create the Fund for the Republic in 1952.



BUCKLEY
. . . just looking

Backed by Ford money, the fund quickly went into the field of civil liberties and civil rights, virgin territory then. The fund supported the Southern Regional Council, helped fund the Commission on the Rights and Liberties of Indians, became involved in the problems of communism, immigration, censorship, segregated housing and other surface questions on the '50s.

Wanting to go deeper, as well as catch his breath, Hutchins left New York in 1959—and made the Centre the fund's sole program.

For a site, 44 acres of Santa Barbara hillside was acquired, on the Grecian theory that people can think better in beautiful surroundings. Soon assembled was a community of the seeking, literate and thoughtful, commonly called, often jeeringly, intellectuals.

Looking back over the past 10 years, Hutchins says that the Centre has "commanded attention, (but) not all of it sympathetic . . . the disclosures of the support of 'liberal' organization by the CIA make it reasonable to suppose that whatever anybody is doing is a part of some conspiracy or other. In this atmosphere, it is hard to believe that the Centre is doing just what it says it is doing, studying democratic institutions, and has never taken the Queen's shilling."

Don't Rent Brains

Nor the government's for that matter, it appears, nor the corporations', nor that of any other moneyed group that is too lazy or too preoccupied to think for itself.

The Centre regularly turns down the kind of government contracts that universities and other group-thinkers pant for. It is not that Hutchins and his staff disdain federal gravy. They just prefer to avoid the bad business that often follows when brains are rented out.

Because of its independence, the Centre on Eucalyptus Hill is unique. And, adds Hutchins simply, "when something is like nothing else, it is hard to comprehend."

Comprehension is helped greatly if one spends some time among the 21 resident Fellows. The morning begins at 9 a.m. when a supporting staff of 50 — from secretaries to gardeners — arrive to open shop.

By 10, the Fellows drift in. Walking around the colonnaded courtyard lined with marble walks, oaks, palms and a plaque to St. Benedict, one half expects to come upon a few Rodin thinkers hard at it.

Instead, there is James A. Pike, the flockless, churchless and some say mindless bishop, rushing along. "Sure," he says to a visitor, "I'd lead the White House's Sunday prayer meeting. But Nixon would never ask me, I'm not safe, you know."

Lost in Talk

Across the way, two sport-shirted gentlemen, with two Pulitzer Prizes, a dozen books and six degrees between them, amble around, lost in talk. Other fellows head to their offices.

Well-seasoned before coming to the Centre, they range from philosophers to physicists, politicians to professors, men who are brilliant and fairly well-known like Pike, Harry Ashmore, Edward Engberg, Rexford Tugwell, Harvey Wheeler, to men who are brilliant but less known, W. H. Ferry, Frank Kelly, John Cogley, Donald McDonald.

Four mornings a week, promptly at 11, the Fellows gather in the conference room, along with any drop-in guests. Armed with coffee, tobacco, pad and pencils, they sit around a cloth-topped table.

"As in any self-respecting institution," says Hutchins about the daily meeting, "the Centre Fellows are free to take individually any position they like. They all avail themselves of this privilege, sometimes in violent opposition to one another . . . though 'dialogue' has become a tired word in the American vocabulary, a candid exchange of ideas and willingness to learn from one another seem to be harder to obtain in our country than in any other in the west.

He Endures Bores

"We don't really want to talk about our differences: The process is unsettling and can lead God knows where. The safest thing is to look, act speak like everbody else."

Either a Fellow or an invited guest will deliver a paper at the daily meeting, after which it is "kicked around or hashed out. Everyone attending has a moral obligation to prepare for the meeting, which means reading in advance the paper to be delivered.

This serves the double purpose of keeping a man from sounding off like a boob and preventing everyone else from listening to one.

After the meeting, the Fellows move into an adjoining room for a casual lunch. In the afternoon, they either read, write, talk, meditate or commiserate.

The daily meetings of the Centre, while seemingly little more than high-toned bull sessions, are nevertheless highly productive. Out of them come many of the articles published in the crisp, fast-growing Centre magazine and in the over-all publications program.

The Centre now has 100,000 members, who pay from $10 a year to several hundred thousand to be on the subscription list.

One comes upon Centre members in all places: Librarians in small Ohio towns; Congressmen and their aides who need material for speeches and programs; Vista volunteers holed up in Appalachia and needing the Centre's magazine to keep the mind active; teachers and professors on quiet campuses who want their courses and students to go deeper than the textbooks; even the military which, to the astonishment of the Centre, recently orderd 2,100 copies of its paper on the ABM.

Ideas Valued

Then there are the thousands of members who get the magazine mostly because they still value ideas and men who are trying to make sense out of life.

Jets have made the Centre accessible. Recent visitors ranged from black preacher Albert Cleage to white priest Daniel Berrigan, pacifist Dorthy Day to conservative William F. Buckley ("Gentleman, I want you to know I am here strictly as a voyeur."), activist Tom Hayden to the late contemplative Thomas Merton.

Americans, feelers more than thinkers, think oddly, if not angrily, on those who use their mind. Know-it-all, smart alec, wise guy are terms whose root meaning is based on the use of knowledge.

At Eucalyptus Hill, men gather who know a lot, if not all of it, alecs who genuinely are smart, guys who truly are wise.

Geared to Action

What saves them all from being deadly bores is that their talk is orientated to action — what should or can be done. Hutchins: "The Centre tries to think about the things it thinks its fellow citizens ought to be thinking about."

Does the country need a place like the Centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions? One answer is in the story about the philosopher who was asked what people would do with themselves when automation put them all out of work. He replied, they could talk with one another.

It Was a Poor Show All Around

By GEORGE BAIN

OTTAWA — The Company of Young Canadians says that programs intended to train poor people for jobs keep trying to turn them into barbers and hairdressers and tractor operators and things like that.

It finds three faults with this.

The first is that the demand for more barbers and hairdressers and tractor operators may not be endless — in fact, "There seem to be few jobs available for the graduates of these programs today."

The second is that it hardly opens unlimited vistas for the poor. "Why," asks the CYC, "do our so-called rehabilitative programs train people for the more menial jobs and ignore the development of their minds?"

★ ★ ★

And, third, it overlooks the fact that, in the poor, there is an untapped pool of experts.

What are the poor experts in? They're experts in being poor. They've had experience. They know what it's all about.

"They know poverty the way a farmer knows soil, a doctor knows the intestinal tract, a banker knows interest rates. They're pros.

"Yet the poor are never paid to study poverty, are never paid to sit on committees and discuss it, are never paid to research it, and are never paid to administer poverty programs," said the CYC — this in a brief to the Senate Committee on Poverty.

★ ★ ★

It would never work.

"I'd like to apply for that job that I saw advertised for an administrator for a poverty program?"

"And what are your qualifications?"

"I'm poor."

"Experience?"

"I was brought up on a submarginal farm in northern New Brunswick. We lived on bacon-dripping on the week-old bread. Then, when I left the farm, I was three years out of work in Bathurst."

"Well, your practical experience seems to be all right. What about the academic side; do you have a degree of any sort?"

"In poverty."

"Obviously we can't hire you simply on the strength of your unsupported word that you know something about poverty, now can we?"

"Perhaps I should have had my accountant photocopy my Unemployment Insurance cheques."

"That sort of flippancy, I would remind you, is the prerogative of the well-to-do; it will do your application no good to indulge in it. Perhaps if you could show me a bank account with practically no money in it . . .?"

"If I had a bank account it would be in the other suit that I don't have either."

★ ★ ★

"Well, now, look, this is all rather unsatisfactory. You come in here claiming to be poor, professing to have some qualifications as a poor man to administer a poverty program, and yet you have nothing to prove it."

"Maybe I could faint from hunger in front of your desk. How would three kids with the seats out of their pants do for documentation? Would you like to see my wife's wardrobe of originals by Givenchy of the Salvation Army?"

"You aren't making things easy for me. We're used to dealing with professional people here."

★ ★ ★

"Believe me, I'm a pro. In the League of the Poor, I'd make All-Canadian. Already, at 37, I'm a candidate for the Hall of Fame."

"Okay, I'm putting my job on the line, but I'll take you on as a Grade IV Clerk (Poverty). You'll start at $2,700-a year."

"I, ah . . ."

"After you've shown what you can do, you'll be in line to move up to Grade III at $2,300 a year. And, in time, if you show us that you really know your stuff, poverty-wise, you could make Grade II or even Grade I at $1,850. That's the best you can do in poverty."

"It doesn't seem like much."

"You don't want to get rich, do you, and blow the job?"

SEARCH FOR PAPYRUS

Heyerdahl Penetrates Central Africa

By THOR HEYERDAHL

How long a period of time the papyrus boats survived side by side with the papyriform wooden ships in ancient Egypt is not known. Certainly, smaller craft for sport and fishing were still made from papyrus reed far into Christian times.

The wooden ships of the Pharoahs, like the giant papyriform cedar vessel of King Cheops recently reassembled from the burial pit at the foot of his pyramid, is a perfect masterpiece in design and workmanship, and yet quite unfit for voyages outside the calm waters of the Nile, as ocean swells would break it apart. It has the lines of an ocean vessel, but the qualities of a mere river boat.

Today papyrus boats of any size are unknown in all of Egypt. The reason is obvious: papyrus no longer grows in this country where it once was a principal element in the culture. Papyrus, which together with the lotus flower was the symbol of ancient Egypt, would have been unknown to the modern Egyptian if not for a few reeds planted in a basin in front of the Cairo Museum, and if not for the fact that every schoolboy knows that papyrus was the first material to serve man for preserving written history: papyrus was man's earliest form of paper.

Far Up Nile

To find papyrus today one has to travel far up the Nile beyond the borders of Egypt, or into the very heart of the African mainland. And in a few of these remote places the custom of building papyrus-boats has survived the millennia together with the plant itself.

This is the fifth of a series of articles written by Thor Heyerdahl about his epic Africa-to-America raft voyage, which comes 22 years after the historic "Kon-Tiki" expedition. Today he discusses searching for papyrus in Chad.

To get a first-hand impression of these ancient watercraft other than from wall paintings on plastered tombs, I decided to visit the remote Lake Chad in the Central African republic of the same name.

Once upon a time the ancient slave route across Africa passed through Chad, and there is evidence of ancient contact with the distant Nile Valley. The young republic of Chad has no railways nor any all-year road outside of its capital, Fort Lamy, which is the centre of all modern activity with an airport and excellent hotels.

To get to the lake together with my French and Italian cameramen I had to hire two Jeeps with experienced local drivers, and start northwards through dry savannah country which gradually turned into the barren sandy wastes of southern Sahara.

Whenever possible we followed old Jeep tracks, but the only traffic encountered was Arab shepherds with flocks of goats and cattle or small caravans with camels and donkeys moving between the isolated desert villages. The temperature was 50 degrees Centigrade in the shade, but the open desert gave us no shade.

No Swim Here

We felt a desperate desire to run in between the juicy green papyrus and plunge into the blue lake behind when shortly before sunset we reached the waterfront village of Bol and had the burning desert behind us. But our drivers held us back, the water was full of bilharzia, a microscopic worm which quickly drills itself through your skin and then multiply to eat you up inside.

Bol with its hundreds of beehive-shaped grass huts was the principal town in the lake area, and the seat of the sherif and the sultan. Contact with the outside world was maintained by a small wireless station and occasionally by Jeep, by a barge circling the large lake, or when not out of repair as at present, by a single-engine, four-place charter plane.

In Bol we met Omar and Mussa, two of the numerous Buduma tribesmen who lived from fishing with papyrus boats on the lake, precisely as on the Nile thousands of years ago.

Like most people in Chad they were tall and well built with a proud bearing and friendly, open faces. Omar lived in a local grass hut but his older brother Mussa lived on one of the floating islands in the lake.

Thousands of islands dot the surface around the borders of this shallow inland sea. Some are fixed and others drift slowly about like trackless planets with the changing winds.

Only the mid portion of Lake Chad is open water, so large that the sight of land is lost in all directions even from a plane. On the mobile islands, formed by decayed papyrus fibres and other water-plants interwoven by live roots, the Buduma people build their homes, plant their crops, and herd their cattle which they swim from island to island as if they were hippotamuses.

Must Fit Roof

Omar and Mussa built for us a papyrus boat small enough to put on the roof of one of our jeeps once we had tried it together with a whole flotilla of larger papyrus vessels. Mussa was a professional papyrus-oat builder who was said to have once built a reed vessel that carried cattle across the open lake to the distant coast of Nigeria.

My meeting with the boatbuilders in the papyrus swamps of Chad sparked an idea that for some months had lain dormant in my mind, I asked Omar, the more active of the two brothers, if he would come to Egypt and build a large "caday" for me. He said yes, if his brother Mussa could come as well, and their friend Abdulaye added on his own accord that he would come along as interpreter.

By the time we were ready to depart from Chad we found ourselves deprived of all worldly possessions. A small taxi-plane was now sent to pick us up in Bol but the two Jeeps with all our cameras and possessions were stolen by the two drivers who had vanished into the desert. The authorities in the capital could only comfort us by stating that this was not theft, it was a part of a pattern of civil war over which they had no control.

Culprits Caught

We turned to the French gendarmes still stationed in this former French colony, and Fench patrols sent out by air and ground finally located the two Jeeps in a lonely desert village. The drivers had thrown away our precious papyrus boat, but in the primitive village they had failed to find buyers for film cameras and technical equipment. All they had managed to sell was the gasoline off the Jeeps' tanks, which made any escape hopeless when they were finally caught.

However, I had no reason to complain. I had established my first contact with new friends in a hidden corner of our modern world where tradition kept alive an art developed to perfection before pharoanic times. Now I knew people who could build a real papyrus ship.

Car Price Level Queried by MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said today "the spirit is more important than the letter" in looking at the pricing policy of the Canadian automobile industry.

He was replying in the Commons to Grace MacInnis (NDP — Vancouver-Kingsway) who asked Mr. Pepin whether he intends to consult Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford about auto pricing policy in relation to the Combines Investigation Act.

Mr. Pepin said pricing policy is difficult to analyse. The government was looking at the "general results" attained by the auto industry — its productivity growth, growth of investments, and so forth.

Blame Shared In Collision

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two deepsea cargo ships Thursday were held equally responsible in Exchequer Court for a collision in fog Sept. 20, 1967, in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, 80 miles southwest of Vancouver.

Mr. Justice F. A. Sheppard held that the Chitose Maru, a 634-foot, 24,254-ton vessel, and the 416-foot, 4,206-ton Marie Skou were equally at fault for getting themselves in a "close quarters situation" which resulted in a crash and damage to both ships in excess of $1,000,000.

Arctic Waters Sovereignty Should Be Asserted—NDP

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's claim to sovereignty over Arctic waters, including the Northwest Passage, is not universally accepted, Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday.

He told the Commons that jurisdiction over Arctic land, including the resources of the northern Continental Shelf, is indisputable and has not been challenged.

However, not all nations were "disposed to recognize" that Canada has absolute sovereignty over waters between the Arctic islands.

The opposition immediately countered that Mr. Trudeau's statement, delivered after a cabinet meeting, has weakened Canada's claim to Arctic waters.

The statement was related to the forthcoming attempt of the U.S. tanker Manhattan to cross the Northwest Passage. A successful trial could mean heavy traffic through the Arctic. Oil strikes have been made at Alaska's Prudhoe Bay and hopes are high in some areas of the Northwest Territories.

"An expansion of this size conforms as much to the interests of Canada as to those of other countries," Mr. Trudeau said, Canada should encourage rather than try to restrain such a development.

He saw no threat to sovereignty from the Manhattan project and emphasized that Canada welcomes it, has concurred in it and will take part in it.

WILL BE ABOARD

The oil companies concerned and the U.S. Coast Guard had consulted Canadian authorities in planning the operation. The Canadian icebreaker John A. Macdonald would be involved, Canadians would advise on ice conditions, and a Canadian official would be aboard the Manhattan.

The sponsors hope to find a route from Alaska to the rich markets of the northeastern U.S. and Europe.

The prime minister noted a 1958 statement by Alvin Hamilton, then northern affairs minister in the Conservative government of John Diefenbaker, that "the area to the north of Canada, including the islands and the waters between the islands and areas beyond, are looked upon as our own. . . ."

Mr. Trudeau said there is a contrary opinion that Canada's claim is limited to the waters around each island. Maritime law was a complex matter involving different opinions.

"Such differences must be resolved not in an arbitrary fashion but in scrupulously respecting the established principles of international law."

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said it appeared Canada was abandoning a position asserted previously. He asked why.

New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas said Canada was "almost inviting someone" to suggest it did not have sovereignty over Arctic waters.

SHOULD ASSERT CLAIM

The government should categorically assert its claim and allow any countries that wanted to dispute it go to court over the matter.

Mr. Trudeau said there are no competing claims to Canadian territory in the Arctic, "an integral part of Canada" to which the administrative, legislative and judicial framework of the rest of the country has been extended.

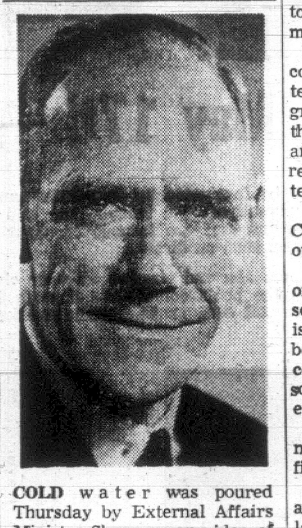
"No country challenges Canada's sovereignty on any other basis."

The government was unaware of any maps disputing Canada's sovereignty over certain Arctic islands, he said. There have been reports that American oil companies have maps showing some Canadian islands as disputed territory.

Mr. Trudeau said that if such maps do exist "they have no official position."

Foreign companies seeking oil and other resources on the islands and Continental Shelf implicitly recognized Canadian sovereignty by operating under Canadian permits and licence.

Mr. Trudeau, Justice Minister John Turner and Governor-General Roland Michener have made separate and unprecedented tours of the Canadian Arctic in the last 10 months.



COLD water was poured Thursday by External Affairs Minister Sharp on any idea of using the International Control Commission (of which Canada is member) as a supervisory body to oversee withdrawal of foreign troops from South Vietnam. In the Commons Sharp said Canada has not been happy with the way the ICC has operated.

Busmen Live To Fight The Same Day

CUERNAVACA, Mexico (UPI) — The brakes failed as the bus was descending a steep mountain road Thursday. Agustin Pedraza and three of his drivers out for a test run shouted out windows and finally attracted a police cruiser.

The police car raced ahead of the careening bus, siren screaming, to warn people out of the path. The bus coasted to a stop on Cuernava's outskirts.

Pedraza, owner of the bus line, and his drivers, Fortunato Diaz, Luciano Arenas and Raul Sanchez, repaired to a bar to calm their nerves.

While toasting their good fortune, another patron of the tavern told them their celebrating annoyed him. In the resulting fight, all four busmen were stabbed and were taken to hospital in serious condition.

Jailed Six Years

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Raymond Joseph Palmer, 34, of Vancouver, was jailed six years Thursday after he was found guilty in county court here of possession of $76,000 in stolen bonds. The bonds were found in a locker last June at the Pacific Coast Bulk Terminals plant in Port Moody. They were claimed to be part of $240,000 in bonds taken from the real estate office of A. N. McIntosh Ltd., in New Westminster in 1962.

Red Power Girls Picket Integration Symposium

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Four youthful Red Power advocates sparked a ripple of resentment Thursday over high entrance fees for the University of British Columbia's three-day symposium here on public school integration.

The four girls, who said they belonged to the Native Alliance for Red Power, showed up at the opening session carrying signs and began picketing the hotel where the symposium is being held.

"We're here to demand that all our people be allowed in free," said spokesman Joyce Bob, a Kamloops area Indian.

She said the $35 admission fee for adults and $15 for Indian students was so high that it precluded most of the province's native population from discussing their own educational needs.

The four young women were invited to attend the sessions free of charge by R. N. Hall, Regional Superintendent of Education for the Indian Affairs Branch.

MAJORITY WHITE

However the Red Power girls said they would not attend unless every other Indian could get in without charge as well.

Delegate Pearle Pearson, a Haida Indian school trustee from the Queen Charlotte Islands, said there should be far more Indian students at the conference, especially from areas where school integration has run into problems.

Of the 250 seminar delegates less than a third were native Indians and few of them were students.

"The Red Power people have their views and I don't necessarily agree with them," said Mrs. Pearson, one of only two Indian school trustees in the province.

"However, I think they're right in their actions in this question. I was very surprised. I expected to see more Indians here."

THEY'LL BE PINCHED BY POLICE

ROME (Reuters) — The days of Rome's bottom-pinching Romeos may be numbered.

Italian police have been told to crack down on noise, thieves, swindlers, prostitutes and "papagalli" — the youths who pester foreign women — so that tourists can have unspoiled vacations here.

A circular issued by police headquarters Wednesday called for a close watch on papagallism and prostitution, both of which it described as a serious threat to increased tourism because of adverse foreign publicity.

Statistics Prove Belt's Worth

Safety belts really do prevent injuries, according to the British Columbia Automobile Association.

Not one of 9,345 occupants wearing combination shoulder-lap safety belts was fatally injured in serious accidents at speeds up to 60 miles an hour. A recent study covered more than 28,000 accidents.

Unbelted occupants were killed at speeds as low as 12 miles an hour, the study showed.

Wearing of safety belts is just one of a list of precautions the BCAA is recommending to motorists as in their campaign to bring about safer driving during the Victoria Day weekend.

There are six frequent kinds of irresponsible driving that lead to accidents, the BCAA said.

Refusal to yield right of way, tailgating, speeding, driving too fast for road and weather conditions, driving on the wrong side of the road, and ignoring stop signs or signals—are all the most fatal habits a driver can have.

Part of the BCAA's advice for holiday driving is to plan the trip carefully, including adequate stops to rest so the driver won't become exhausted.

Share the driving if possible, the organization suggests, since even brief relief from the constant decision-making will help revitalize reflexes necessary for driving.

SLEEP IN BED

Avoid drowsiness by keeping the car well-ventilated, playing the radio, or encouraging conversation. Light meals and comfortable clothes are a big factor, but most important is a good night's sleep the night before.

Don't drive when you have been drinking. According to recent BCAA studies, drinking and specially heavy drinking, plays a major role in half of all fatal crashes, and in two-thirds of all fatal crashes where only one car is involved.

Cars should have properly inflated tires in good shape, and drivers who need glasses should wear them.

Regular physical checkups are important to make sure there is no physical or mental condition that will impair driving, and the family doctor should be asked if there are any medicines you are using that will impair driving, the BCAA suggests.

Russell Fears World Destruction

LONDON (Reuters) — The third and final volume of Bertrand Russell's autobiography is dominated by the philosopher's constant fear that mankind will destroy itself by nuclear warfare.

Earl Russell, who will be 97 Sunday, says that in the early 1940s and 1950s, "it was obvious to me that a nuclear war would put an end to civilization."

"It was also obvious that unless there were a change of policies in both East and West a nuclear war was sure to occur sooner or later.

"The dangers were in the back of my mind from the early 1920s."

The final volume of the eminent philosopher-mathematician's autobiography, covering the years 1944 to 1967, was published by George Allen and Unwin.

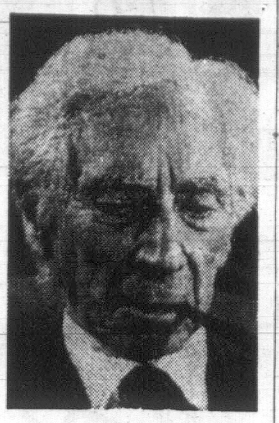
In it Russell, recognized as one of the greatest thinkers of his era and winner of the 1950 Nobel prize for literature, recalls speeches, correspondence, interviews, statements and demonstrations he made against nuclear armament from the end of the Second World War until the present.

Russell also describes his lack of success in pointing out the dangers to people.

"Those who try to make you uneasy by talk about atom bombs are regarded as troublemakers, as people to be avoided, as people who spoil the leisure of a fine day by foolish prospects of improbable rain."

Defending a view he held in 1948—that the United States should threaten immediate war to force nuclear disarmament on Russia—the aristocratic agitator says: "The usual criticism is that I, a pacifist, once advocated the threat of war.

"It seems to cut no ice that I have reiterated ad nauseam that I am not a pacifist, that I believe some wars, a very few, were justified, even necessary. . . ."



RUSSELL
. . . 97 on Sunday

In this volume, Russell traces his increasingly active commitment to the causes of social justice and nuclear disarmament, including his part in public demonstrations—one of which led to him being put in jail for a week at the age of 88—and the Bertrand Russell Peace Foundation.

Each chapter ends with correspondence between Russell and his critics and friends, including Chinese Premier Chou En-lai, the late Indian prime minister Jawaharlal Nehru, Albert Einstein, Eleanor Roosevelt, poet T. S. Eliot, scientist Julian Huxley and writer H. G. Wells.

Check Urged On Youthful Drug-users

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — delegates at a United Church of Canada conference decided Thursday that police and children's aid societies should have more power in dealing with drug abuse among children.

The church's Quinte conference passed a resolution asking the provincial government to amend the Child Welfare Act so parents would be obligated to take drug-using children for a medical examination.

If parents fail to comply they would be brought to court to explain their neglect.

Rev. John B. Hardie, a professor at Pine Hill theological college, Halifax, said the prophet Isiah's concept of brotherly love will someday draw everyone, including fascists and communists, to the church.

"They will ask who these people are, and it shall be said they are Christians."

Staff of Indian Branch In Mass Resignation

TORONTO (CP) — The 10-man staff of the Indian development branch of Ontario's department of social and family services resigned today.

In a letter to John Yaremko, minister of social and family services, the group said it had been unable to function according to the original guidelines of the branch.

Joseph Dufour, branch director, told a press conference the staff members feel "we cannot offer effective services to Indian people while operating under the present policies of the province."

In a statement released at the press conference, the resigning staff members said they had been approached during the last two years by a number of groups and individuals concerned "over the inability of the Indian development branch to deliver effectively community development services to Indian communities."

The newly completed setting for a fascinating collection of sea and air creatures is shown receiving its finishing touches. Now it is fully inhabited by playful dolphins, sleek eels, octopuses, seals, killer whale and a variety of sea birds. It boasts specimens from all sorts of native fish and sea life found in our coastal waters.

Before the Magistrate

Marijuana users in the area came in for another blast Thursday in central court from Magistrate William Ostler.

"The use of marijuana is practically pandemic not only in B.C. but in Canada," he said.

The comments came as he placed Lorna Sewell, 19, of 576 Obed, on two years' probation for possession of the drug. She pleaded guilty.

A charge of trafficking was withdrawn.

The magistrate said probation in this case would be more onerous than a fine and warned the sentence was not a precedent.

"Each case must be decided on its own facts and only in exceptional circumstances is probation justified."

Miss Sewell was also ordered to post a $500 good behavior bond.

The girl's lawyer, Edward Farquahar, in asking for a suspended term referred to several other such terms given including a girl who was one of the first persons to be charged with the offence in the city several years ago.

Magistrate Ostler said that case arose "at the commencement of the tidal wave of marijuana use in this community."

Crown counsel Edward Pollard stated he did not think a fine or a jail term would be appropriate in the case. He said probation for some time was required, however.

When is a house not a dwelling house? Probably when no one lives there.

The question arose after two 20-year-old persons, Carl Wong and Marvis Moran pleaded guilty to breaking and entering and theft from a house at 16 Montreal Street.

The charge referred to a unused and vacant dwelling house and evidence was given that the building was boarded up and had been unoccupied for a period of time.

The case began in the morning and was remanded to the afternoon court hearing so the magistrate could determine whether the charge was correct.

He said then the words in the charge were contradictory and mutually exclusive and therefore could not apply to a dwelling house.

"The charge is incorrect and could be amended," he said.

He then refused the guilty pleas and told prosecutor John Macintyre the facts might support a charge of wilful damage or theft.

"I don't think breaking and entering in all the circumstances is really justified. I would prefer you to lay a charge of theft of wilful damage."

Macintyre then withdrew the charge.

Earlier court was told the accused had been looking for a haunted house, saw the one on Montreal Street and had gone in. Inside they gook a marble slate, some books, a bookstand, a tapestry and some articles of clothing.

A juvenile was also involved, court heard.

"I can't think of a more contemptible thief than you are," Magistrate Ostler told a 19-year-old youth who stole a piggy bank from a family where he had been staying.

Paul Larabie, of Ontario, pleaded guilty to theft and was remanded to May 23 for sentence.

The accused was picked up at the bus depot after leaving the house on Menzies Street early Thursday. The piggy bank contained $9.49 and Larabie had $74.66 with him at the time.

A 19-year-old youth was ordered to help repair and replace two street signs he and two juveniles took and damaged.

Jon A. Evans, of 2809 Rodney, pleaded guilty to wilful damage.

Magistrate Ostler fined him $35 and put him on a $50 six-month good behavior bond. He said he was to report to the Saanich department of public works within two weeks to work on the signs.

Court was told the two Saanich signs and one more from Beacon Hill Park were found in the trunk of a car April 6 in which the three persons were driving.

"Can't you find anything more rewarding or stimulating to do?" asked the magistrate. "I can't see what kicks you get out of this conduct."

Evans said he had a "few social beers" before the incident.

Magistrate Ostler said the accused seemed sensible enough but appeared to have been just carried away.

A youth who earlier pleaded guilty to stealing from cars received a severe tongue-lashing from the magistrate in addition to three fines and a day in jail.

Robert Malcolm, 18, of CFB Esquimalt, must pay a total of $350, post a $250 one-year good behavior bond. He was also prohibited from driving for a year.

Magistrate Ostler said he made the prohibition so Malcolm would receive no gratification for his conduct.

"The significant thing is your cold-blooded and callous determination to own an automobile for which you have to steal things," he said.

"You had no compunction about canabilizing other automobiles to bring yours up to a standard."

Malcolm took a stereo tape deck and tapes, a radio and a wheel and tire from different cars, court heard earlier.

A youth who stole money from a gas station while visiting a friend there will be sentenced May 23.

Edward J. Stone, 20, of 584 Whiteside, pleaded builty to theft over $50.

Det. Angus Stewart said Stone went to the Mayfair Service, 3180 Douglas Street, early Tuesday and pulled a canvas bag containing money from a wooden box with a slot in the top. He removed $33 from it and threw away the bag. About $13 of the cash was spent.

"Didn't it occur to you that this criminal act might put suspicion on your friend?" asked the magistrate.

Stone said not at the time but it did now.

A pre-sentence report is being prepared.

Leonard Dupuis, 18, of 1666 Derby, was fined $400 for dangerous driving. Michael Lanning, 2256 Bellamy, was fined $150 for hit and run.

U.S. Plan 'Reasonable'

WELLINGTON, N.Z. (Reuters) — Prime Minister Keith Holyoake of New Zealand Thursday described President Nixon's proposals for scaling down the Vietnam war as "fair, reasonable and statesmanlike."

He told a news conference he believes the United States president is right in saying the immediate need is to begin serious negotiations so the war can be brought to an end.

"The talks in Paris have gone on too long and with too little result," he said. "It is time for the parties to the negotiations to get down to the detailed business of working out a reasonable and practical settlement."

Holyoake, whose country has troops in Vietnam, also praised Nixon's eight-point plan for bringing about a peaceful settlement.

Profit Reported

OTTAWA (CP) — A special auditing team reported Thursday that Davie Shipbuilding Ltd. made a profit of $919,888 on the $9,231,677 it received from the 1966-67 refit of the aircraft carrier Bonaventure.

GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Trade was light at the closing of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

Locals and commission houses traded in flax at lower levels.

Exporter interest on declining rapeseed prices continued. Volume was light.

Domestic shippers took oats and barley for eastern feeders. Oats had some inter-month spreading.

Rye had local and commission house trade with some exporter interest in new crop futures.

Lakehead prices for class two, IGA and domestic wheat all were down ⅛ cent.

CHICAGO (AP) — Weather today affected commodity futures and prices reacted two different ways on the board of trade.

Trade was active only at the opening and the close.

A report that the weather had improved enough to permit limited work in some wet fields of the corn belt tended to influence liquidation of corn futures and prices closed lower.

Hawker Situation Takes Turn for Better: Hall

TORONTO (CP) — Shareholders of Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd. Thursday voted to reduce the company's capital by about $29,164,000.

Sir Arnold Hall, chairman of the Hawker Siddeley Group Ltd. of London, England, said the reduction will put the company in a better position to resume dividend-paying than would otherwise be possible.

The Hawker Siddeley Group owns 59 per cent of the Canadian company.

Hawker Siddeley Canada stopped paying dividends on its preferred shares in January, 1968, and has not paid a common-share dividend for 10 years.

The write-down of capital will give the company a $2.9 million surplus in retained earnings instead of a $26.25 million deficit, Sir Arnold said.

"Otherwise it would take a very long time for earnings to overcome the deficit."

The write-down represents the company's loss in the sale of its 77-per-cent interest in Dosco Ltd. to Sidbec, a Quebec Crown corporation, last year.

Interim List Posted Today At Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — The semi-official board of unlisted stocks at the Vancouver Stock Exchange had quotations chalked up for the last time Thursday as the exchange introduced a new system of "interim listings."

Some unlisted socks will again be traded in the old system under which brokers telephone each other for bids, offerings and prices. For several years, the exchange had provided a place in its building where brokers could meet to trade unlisted stocks.

Although member brokers handled the trading, the exchange took no official responsibility for regulating or controlling the traffic.

The new system will provide a market for unlisted shares which the exchange now can control and regulate. Companies had been given three months until Thursday to apply for an interim listing and so far 60 have been placed on the board. Another 60 applications are being processed by the exchange's listing committee.

Stocks which qualify for interim listing have a year in which to qualify for full listing. If they don't qualify, they return to unlisted status and may not be traded in the exchange.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

Kaiser Resources

Former National Energy Board chairman Ian N. McKinnon, of Calgary, is elected to the board of directors of Kaiser Resources Ltd.

McKinnon was the first NEB chairman on its inception in 1959, but for 11 years previous he had been chairman of Alberta Oil and Gas Conservation Board. Prior to that he had been deputy minister and assistant deputy minister in the Alberta department of mines and minerals.

PWA Halted

Pacific Western Airlines has lost the right to serve Hudson Hope on a commercial air service also linking Prince George and Dawson Creek.

The air transport committee of the Canadian Transport Commission said it assumed the line was no longer providing service to Hudson Hope, a heavily travelled route during construction of the Bennett Dam.

Evans Products

Evans Products Co. Ltd. of Portland, Ore., has named David L. Ford, Portland, as president.

Ford will have general management responsibility for operations in British Columbia, including a softwood plywood plant in Vancouver, Savona Timber Co. in Savona, near Kamloops, the Commercial Lumber Co. in Lillooet and Gateway Lumber in Ashcroft.

N. Can. Oils

North Canadian Oils Ltd. reports total revenues for the first quarter of 1969 of $1.18 million, nearly 50 per cent higher than the total for the corresponding period of 1968.

Cash earnings for the Jan. 1-March 31 period were $689,406. Net income, after all charges including provision for income tax deferred to later years, was $298,000.

As well as income from gas and oil production, its gas pipeline and investment reported a profit of $8.45 million from the sale of its interest in North Western Pulp and Power Ltd. of Calgary, bringing net income for the three months to $8,7 million.

Can. Superior

Canadian Superior Oil Ltd. had increased revenue but lower net earnings for the first three months of this year compared with the same period in 1968.

Income dropped from $1.98 million or 23 cents a share to $715,301 or eight cents a share while gross revenue increased from $8.7 million to $9.3 million.

The lower income was due largely to higher production expenses, increased exploration and drilling, and provisions for income tax not made at this time last year.

Patino Mining

Patino Mining Corp. had net income of $2 million or 46 cents a share in the first three months of this year, compared with $506,000 or 12 cents in the similar 1968 period.

The figures, given in an interim financial statement, do not include a profit of $1.4 million this year on the sale of Patino's holding in Advocate Mines Ltd. Special income last year totalled $95,000.

Power Corp.

Power Corporation of Canada Ltd. reports net earnings for the first quarter at $2 million or 16 cents a share on combined participating preferred and common stock.

Comparisons for the same period last year were not given in the company's quarterly report, because of a change in the method of accounting for subsidiaries this year.

The company's earnings included results from Canadian Inter-urban Properties Ltd., Dominion Glass Co. Ltd., Blue Bonnets Raceway Inc. and Quebec Telemedia Inc.

Takeovers Spur Defence Tactics

MONTREAL (CP) — Executives must learn the corporate art of self defence if they wish to keep unwelcome suitors at bay in this age of takeovers.

J. M. Brickley, retail sales co-ordinator for investment dealer Nesbitt Thomson and Co. Ltd., says there are some effective ways in which companies can protect themselves if they know the ropes.

Howedver, he told the Corporation of Chartered Administrators of Quebec, mergers and takeovers will continue although conglomerates are in trouble on a number of fronts.

Furthermore, a merger might be in the best interests of a smaller company. It might be the only way it could compete. Still, it was better to pick a marriage partner rather than be raped.

Consolidation is a trend that goes beyond companies, Brickley said. Municipalities have found that the metro concept has value. Police, fire and hospital service can be shared in the interest of cost-saving.

In the corporate field, conglomerates are under scrutiny in both Canada and the United States. The Washington Scurities and Exchange Commission is studying possible violation of securities acts by conglomerates.

Many takeover bids fail in Canada because Canadian boards refuse to authorize a public bid for control, he said. Canada may not have any full conglomerates yet, but it has "evolving conglomerates."

One U.S. firm halted a takeover bid through the aggressive action of its key management. They threatened to resign and start another company doing the same thing as the original company.

Outlining several manoeuvres designed as a defence against takeover offers from an unwelcome suitor, Mr. Brickley recommendtd:

- Learn the tactics of a takeover. The bidder will likely hold a relatively large part of your stock already. The amount may be just under 10 per cent, so it will not have to be reported.
- Change your accounting practices. The idea is to get so much net profit on the bottom line as possible. This tends to make the stock more costly and the bid more expensive for a prospective takeover company.
- Try to change the quorum bylaw so that a larger percentage of stockholder votes is required to ratify a takeover. But don't make it too high in case you want to bring in a friendly partner to help fend off the bid.
- Become an aggressor yourself.
- Analyse the stock list and try to find any extraordinary accumulation of stock.
- Be wary of company espionage. In the U.S. companies have hired private detectives. In some circles, company espionage "is standard procedure."
- Get any takeover attempts out in the open as soon as possible by having press releases and telegrams ready to send out, and contact your shareholders.

Wall St. House Courts Canuck Financial Firm

MONTREAL (CP) — Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith Inc. and Royal Securities Corp. Ltd. of Canada have agreed in principle to "affiliate Royal Securities with Merrill Lynch."

The companies said in a joint statement Thursday the agreement is "subject to the necessary approvals of shareholders, stock exchanges and regulatory authorities."

Royal Securities is one of Canada's oldest investment firms while the New York-based Merrill Lynch is the world's largest brokerage house.

Alan S. Gordon, president of Royal Securities, said the deal would be advantageous to both shareholders and Canadian investors.

"The affiliation will increase the availability of capital to Canadian enterprises, both industrial and governmental. It will give Canadian access to stronger facilities and broader markets in the investment field."

Royal Securities, underwriters, investment dealers and brokers, is based in Montreal and operates 18 offices across Canada, employing about 300 persons.

The announcement said Royal Securities will continue all operations under its present name.

Merrill Lynch has assets estimated at more than $2 billion and net earnings for 1968 of $50 million.

Royal Securities was established by Lord Beaverbrook, then William Maxwell Aitken, as an investment banking business in 1903.

It was sold to an associate, Isaak Walton Killam, in 1915. After Killam's death in 1955, control passed to a group of company officials.

E. A. Pierce and Co., a predecessor of Merrill Lynch, opened offices in Canada in 1925 and became a member of the Toronto Stock Exchange in 1926. Merrill Lynch now employs 300 persons in Toronto, Montreal, Calgary and Vancouver offices.

Pemberton, Homes Ltd. would be most pleased if you will accept this invitation to witness the transformation of this house during its four stages: "Before," "Studding Up," "Nearly There" and "Home Sweet Home."

This is your opportunity to watch an old house actually being RE-CREATED and RE-DESIGNED, and to learn the costs involved.

If the many hundreds of old homes in Victoria had such a treatment, older districts would take on new life and dreary houses would become an asset in the acute housing inventory.

Thieu Regime Measured

SAIGON (WP) — In Vietnam, the political strength of the Thieu regime is generally measured in two ways: against the influence of other anti-Communist politicians in South Vietnam, and against the strength of the Communists.

By the first measurement, Thieu now is widely regarded as the strongest South Vietnamese leader since the late president Ngo Dinh Diem. The American embassy here is especially pleased with the success of Thieu's efforts to consolidate his position in Saigon, and the embassy's pleasure seems to be reflected in U.S. statements here and in Washington.

The second measurement produces less clearcut results. Many American officials here and numerous Vietnamese doubt that the government is in a position to challenge the Communists in an open political struggle. One said: "If the war were to stop tomorrow, the country would go Communist within five years. There's no doubt about it."

This diplomat—and many Vietnamese who wish Thieu well, at least in principle—believe that the anti-Communist forces are now entering a crucial period. If anti-Communist nationalists can succeed in the next six to twelve months in forming an effective popular front, these observers think the Communists can be beaten—perhaps on the battlefield and certainly after the fighting is over.

'Bastion of Bourgeoisie,' How Prof Sees Victoria

Dr. V. Setty Pendakur came to Victoria Thursday and flayed a few sacred cows.

The University of British Columbia professor of planning was speaking at the annual meeting of the Capital Region Branch of the Community Planning Association of Canada.

In what CPAC branch director Foster Isherwood described as a "scatter-gun attack," Pendakur didn't miss many targets.

He described universities as dispensing "$80 million worth of cow dung."

He said the public school system was "even more backward."

He called Victoria "the bastion of the bourgeoisie, the enclave of the elite, the seat of the good life."

Even the CPAC felt the lash as Pendakur told them they were not the general public but "an insignificant elite."

CLICHE-RIDDEN

Judging from the sustained applause, many CPAC members agreed with him.

"Your views for the most part are contrary to those of the general public," he said.

He urged the CPAC to tackle specific planning problems and explain them in simple terms to the public.

"Otherwise you should have a dinner once a month and forget the meeting."

Pendakur said universities and institutions had failed to respond to the rapid pace of change in the world.

"Universities are more cliche-ridden and backward-looking than any government at any level at any time in the history of man."

He said the public school system was worse.

"The curriculum doesn't even try to take into account the fact that a child has been exposed to from 5,000 to 15,000 hours of television when he reaches Grade 1," said Pendakur.

"No account is taken of the increased rate of absorption and the information barrage in recent years."

Pendakur attacked the "Anglo-Saxon code of ethics" which, he said, places so much emphasis on small details.

"Rather than goals, values and contributions there is an over-emphasis on identifying conflicts of interest."

Pendakur said he couldn't care less if Maritime Realty got control of planning in Victoria "as long as they are answerable to the people of the area."

STATUS MONGERS

He criticized those who use organizations and clubs as status symbols and used as an example a candidate for the UBC senate who belonged to 17 organizations.

"For $7.50 you can join CPAC, never attend a meeting, and have it listed in the UBC senate election booklet. Garbage," he said.

Pendakur said the role of the family which once provided a basic interaction is now being taken over by the government.

He sees a reversal of this trend, however, with more leisure time becoming available.

Three other healthy trends he sees are the concept of the guaranteed income, radical changes in transportation and ownership, and an increasing emphasis on the preservation of the environment.

"The whole idea of being stuck in a job is gone with the guaranteed income," he said.

TELECAB SERVICE

Pendakur predicted that within 25 years a new service, the "telcab," will be available in major North American cities.

The resident in Oak Bay can dial a number and a time he wants a vehicle and an electronic vehicular co-ordinator will take over.

A driverless vehicle about the size of a small European car will arrive and take him to his destination.

He will use the vehicle as he uses his phone with a monthly bill for the service.

"This is no dream," Pendakur said. "These vehicles are already in the experimental stage.

"And yet people do not respond to change. In Victoria when they talk of new transportation they're talking about diesel buses."

Planners Criticized For Sewage Stand

The Capital Region branch of the Community Planning Association of Canada was criticized by its president Thursday for failing to take a firm stand on the 1968 sewer bylaw referendum in Saanich.

J. A. Di Castri, who was re-elected to his second term as branch president, said CPA had failed "to practise what we preach."

"It is a regrettable commentary on an organization of this type if it cannot make a firm policy statement on a planning issue," Di Castri said.

He said a meeting held early in 1968 resulted in no firm resolution on the sewer bylaw referendum.

NEED FOR STUDY

"This indicates a need for greater study in depth of current topics so that our members can reach decisions based on informed judgment," he said.

In his annual report, Di Castri stressed the need to acheive an impact on the community.

He said attendance at three public meetings to discuss regional district government was less than encouraging.

"We have to crystallize the importance of planning problems withing this group and then set them clearly before the public," he said.

"There is a responsibility for each member of the community to be aware of the changes that are taking place."

Other members re-elected for the second year are Mrs. Elsie Shepherd, vice-president; Mrs. Barbara Dykhuizen, secretary; and Frank Crocker, treasurer.

College Masters For Uvic Appointed

Two English professors have been appointed masters of the University of Victoria's colleges.

Prof. Grant McOrmond will become master of Craigdarroch College and Dr. Byran Gooch will be master of Lansdowne College July 1.

Craigdarroch College was officially opened in 1968, with Ronald Jeffels, dean of student and college affairs, as master.

Construction on Lansdowne College residential complex is expected for completion by September.

Uvic's college system is designed to break down the impersonality of a large, fast-expanding institution by providing residential-recreation groupings that all students can belong to.

Masters will assist in planning college activities and handle day-to-day administration.

Reforms Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawyer Charles Maclean, only candidate for the leadership of the provincial Progressive Conservative party, Thursday urged sweeping reforms of the organization at the annual meeting of the Vancouver South constituency association. Fourteen persons heard Mr. Maclean call for party unity and add that the party would be better served if "we spent less time fighting and arguing with each other.

Boo Barrage Routs Horton

WILLIE HORTON . . . target of fans

"He's just emotionally upset or he wouldn't do that," said manager Mayo Smith after the game, won by Detroit 2-1 on Dick McAuliffe's 10th-inning home run.

Few were aware Horton, who grounded out and struck out twice in three at bats, had left the dugout. Rookie Ron Woods replaced him in the top of the eighth in a substitution not planned by Smith.

"He took himself out of the game," Smith said. "He came back into the clubhouse.

"Some of the guys came in to talk to him but he was just wild . . . He's got friends on the ballclub who couldn't even talk to him."

Horton led the Tigers in hitting .285 and home runs 36 last year as they won their first pennant and World Series in 23 years. But he had slumped this year at the plate, hitting just .213 with four home runs and 13 runs batted in.

He has struck out 34 times.

CLOSE TO FANS

Horton always has had a special closeness with his fans, particularly children, many of whom show up time and again in the left field stands to cheer their hero.

Only last Saturday he handed his extra baseball glove to one young fan in left during pregame drills and received a loud ovation as he walked back to the dugout.

"I've never had a guy take his uniform off in a game like that before," said Smith.

Smith said pitching coach Johnny Sain told him about Horton's departure.

"I didn't have time to go into the clubhouse to talk to him and find out what was wrong," Smith said. "I had to worry about the game.

"I can't read his mind. Maybe it's from last night. Maybe it's from tonight. I don't know."

Wednesday night, Horton looked bad as he fell and a single to left went past him for an error. Subsequently he was booed in that game against the White Sox.

Smith was asked if any disciplinary action would be taken against the muscular outfielder.

"I want a chance to talk to him before I take any action," Smith said.

Oriole Hurler Takes Chances, Loses No-Hitter

By The Canadian Press

It's not the simplest of decisions when two men stand between you and a no-hit ball game and one has your number and the other is the leading batter in the American League.

That decision faced pitcher Dave McNally of Baltimore Thursday night so he took his chances and pitched to Cesar Tovar who tagged a single, the only hit in the Orioles 5-0 shutout over Minnesota Twins.

"Tovar always gets his hits off me," said McNally after the game, showing no surprise at the loss of his no-hitter.

Tovar grinned and said:

"I told my team-mates I'm going to hit off him. I hit McNally pretty good. I usually get two hits off him. But he pitched too good tonight."

Had McNally walked Tovar, he would have been faced by Rod Carew, whose .383 batting average is the best in the league.

In other American League games, Detroit Tigers tripped Chicago White Sox 2-1 in 10 innings and Kansas City Royals whipped Cleveland Indians 5-2.

In the National League, Atlanta Braves hung on to beat New York Mets 6-5 and Philadelphia Phillies shut out Cincinnati Reds 7-0.

THREW 95 PITCHES

It was the second one-hitter for McNally, who threw only 95 pitches and faced 29 batters. He pitched one against Washington Senators in 1964 which was broken up by Don Lock in the eighth inning. Tovar also ended six innings of no-hit work by McNally against the Twins in a game last year.

Andy Etchebarren's two-run triple gave the Orioles a quick lead in the second inning and McNally coasted. Boog Powell also drove in two runs for the Orioles.

Dick McAuliffe's leadoff homer in the 10th beat Chicago. It was the fifth homer of the year for the Tigers' second baseman.

Jim Northrup had tied the score for Detroit with a homer in the seventh, wiping out a 1-0 Chicago lead built on two walks and Ed Herrmann's run-scoring single.

Ed Kirkpatrick drove in four runs—three of them with a homer—leading Kansas City past Cleveland and Luis Tiant. It was the seventh straight loss for Tiant, a 21-game winner last year.

Rich Allen of Philadelphia sent another baseball into orbit during the Phillies' rout of the Reds. His fifth home run of the season sailed against a sign atop the centre field roof at Connie Mack Stadium, 410 feet from the plate and 85 feet high.

PASSES GEHRIG

The eighth-inning shot was only the icing on the cake, but it made manager Bob Skinner's post-game hamburger taste "like sirloin steak" after six consecutive defeats.

Hank Aaron socked the 516th and 517th homers of his career and moved into eighth place in career total bases, passing Lou Gehrig as the Braves edged the Mets.

The Phillies loaded the bases in the first inning with none out and again with one away in the second but Cincinnati's Tony Cloninger escaped both times.

Deron Johnson got the Phils started in the third with a run-scoring single after Allen had stroked the first of three singles preceding his homer and stole second.

Ranger Finds Scoring Range

Al Ranger fired four goals Thursday as visiting Nanaimo O'Keefes bombed Kings Hotel 14-7 in a Vancouver Island Lacrosse League game at Memorial Arena.

Mike Good and Jim Butterfield added doubles, while Billy Mercer, Gary Lonsdell, Brian Anderson, Bill Dalziel, Keith Manns and Roger Dalroyana scored singles for Nanaimo.

Fred Molson and Smokey McLean got doubles for Kings, while Jamie McLeod, Terry Stocks and Steve John scored one each.

Tarasov Censured By Soviet Leaders

MOSCOW (AP) — The coach of the Soviet national hockey team, which lost two games to Czechoslovakia in the world championships last March, has been disciplined for his recent behavior at a national championship here, Tass said Thursday.

The official Soviet news agency said the government committee for physical culture and sports stripped Anatoly Tarasov of his title, Merited Coach of the USSR.

The action came two days after a Soviet newspaper raised the question of whether he should be fired. Tass did not say whether the removal of his honorary title was a step toward firing him.

Tass also made no mention of his team's defeats to Czechoslovakia, which touched off anti-Soviet demonstrations in Prague and helped lead to the downfall of Alexander Dubcek as Czechoslovak Communist party chief.

Tarasov's national team, despite losing to the Czechs, won the world championship at Stockholm for the seventh straight year.

Tass repeated criticism of Tarasov made Tuesday by the Sovietsky Sport newspaper, which said he held up a nationally televised game 35 minutes last Sunday when he disputed the disallowal of a goal by his Army team against Spartak.

Tarasov coaches Army when not occupied with the national team. Spartak won the game 3-1 and the national championship.

Tass said a meeting of the sports committee found Tarasov guilty of "crudely violating sports ethics." It said that, despite his merits, Tarasov has begun "to show intolerance of criticism."

MEET DRAWS LARGE ENTRY

Entries are pouring in for the B.C. indoor swimming championships and one of the biggest invasions of splashers ever to hit Victoria appears assured for next weekend.

Officials of the sponsoring Victoria Amateur Swimming Club announced today that about 600 entries have been received for the two-day meet, scheduled for the Crystal Gardens on May 24-25. Deadline for entries is Wednesday.

Some of Canada's Olympic atheletes are numbered among the Vancouver entries, which include almost 100 from the Canadian Dolphins squad.

NATIONAL TV TO COVER CANADIAN CHAMPIONSHIP

Little League Ends Sudden-Death

National television will cover the Canadian Little League championship final which will be played at Hampton Park in Saanich Aug. 15 or 16.

Wilf Cain, director of Canadian Little League, announced the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will telecast one-hour coverage of the championship final on the national network at 1 p.m. Pacific Daylight Time, Saturday, Aug. 16.

It is the second time national television has covered the Canadian Little League final. The first televised championship was in 1966.

Cain also announced changes in structure of the tournament which decides teams representing Canada in the Little League world series at Williamsport, Pa.

The tournament, which begins at Hampton Park Aug. 12, will be a double-elimination schedule for the first time, Cain announced.

Previously it was a sudden-death affair, with teams eliminated after one loss.

Under the new structure, which affects tournament play at local, regional, provincial and Canadian levels, teams must lose twice before they are eliminated from continuing play.

Cain said Thursday the changes were approved last month during the international congress at Detroit.

He said the reason for the change was that in the Canadian final, where a team might have travelled 3,000 miles from one coast to the other, it was unfair to eliminate a team on the basis of one loss.

Under the new schedule it will take six or possibly seven games to decide the Canadian champions for 1969.

It will be a four-team tournament, and opening draws have already been made, according to Cain.

He said play starts Aug. 12 with a game between the Quebec-Maritimes champion and the Alberta-Saskatchewan-Manitoba winner. That game is set for 2 p.m.

Following opening ceremonies at 5:30 p.m., the B.C. and Ontario survivors meet in first-round action.

First-round losers clash at 2 Wednesday afternoon, with the loser eliminated, while first-round winners meet at 6 p.m.

Winner of the Wednesday afternoon game and loser of the Wednesday evening game meet Thursday night at 6, with the loser eliminated and the winner advancing against Wednesday night's winner Friday night.

Should the previous loser win the match, a seventh and deciding final would be played Saturday morning at 10 a.m.

Foster Trophy Races Highlight Big Weekend

There is ample variety on the list of sports events, but it's a safe bet that the biggest crowds of this holiday weekend will be beating a path to Western Speedway.

Archers will be staging an invitational tournament Sunday at the Seaview club range, softballers start Saturday in an invitational tourney at Central Park, four soccer clubs will chase a trophy in tournament play Sunday and Monday at Hampton Park, baseball, softball and cricket clubs will be continuing league play at various sites.

But for the people who like speed, noise and a touch of danger, the action will be at Western.

That's where the annual "Billy Foster Championship 100" will launch the Canadian-American Modified Racing Association season and a bevy of experienced drivers with slick cars are heading for the Langford oval for the start of a new campaign.

GREGG GUNNING

One of them will be Bob Gregg, the Spokane veteran who has been wheeling racing cars for almost 30 of his 48 years and who is hoping to repeat his Foster 100 triumph of last year.

Gregg won't be expecting easy rides because the event, divided over two racing days—Saturday and Monday—has attracted most of the CMRA circuit's top performers, including two Victoria pilots who are among the seven local entrants.

Victorians Tony Mortel and Roy Smith are rated big threats to grab top money in the event, which is named in memory of Victoria pilot Billy Foster, who died in a crash at Riverside, Calif., in January of 1967 after his brilliant driving had carried him to the Indianapolis 500.

Mortel, 21, was named "rookie of the year" on the CAMRA circuit last year after finishing sixth in point standings. Smith also had a sensational rookie year, placing fourth over-all among CAMRA pilots.

ISLAND CHALLENGERS

Other Island drivers slated for action are Bill Powell, Albert Smith (no relation to Roy), Fred Best, Bill Powell, Pete Beaudry and Nanaimo's Ray Pottinger.

Among the visitors will be Norm Ellefson, CAMRA champion in 1967; Brent Nyborg, Idaho State champ from Boise; Vancouver's Ralph Monhay and another Boise driver, Ken Hamilton, who will be driving a car built at Indianapolis by Victoria's Grant King.

Racing at Western is scheduled for Saturday and Monday with each day's program including a trophy dash, three heats and a 50-lap main event. The championship will go to the driver accumulating the most points over the two days. Time trials start Saturday at 7 p.m. and begin Monday at 2 p.m.

Times and place of most other competitions may be found in the Sports Menu, printed below.

West Bromwich Star Fined and Suspended

LONDON (Reuters) — English soccer internationals Nobby Stiles and Jeff Astle have both been suspended for seven days and fined by the disciplinary committee of the English Football Association.

The penalties, announced today, follow incidents when Stiles and Astle were playing for their clubs in league matches. The suspensions will commence at the start of the next English season in August.

Stiles was fined £100 ($260) in addition to the suspension after being cautioned for "persistently infringing the laws of the game" in Manchester United's match against Burnley April 19. The matter was referred to the disciplinary committee because Stiles had previously received a caution in a match against Everton in March.

Astle, the West Bromwich Albion player who won his first full England cap in the recent British international championship series, was fined £50 ($130) in addition to his suspension for kicking an opponent in Albion's match against Newcastle April 19. He had previously been cautioned in a match against Southampton last January.

MANCHESTER SIDELINED BY MILAN

MANCHESTER (CP) — AC Milan of Italy gained the final of the European Cup of Champions soccer tournament on a 2-1 goals aggregate despite a 1-0 defeat by Manchester United of England here Thursday night.

Milan won the first leg, 2-0, at home and survived an onslaught of pressure from United, the defending champion, in the second leg to qualify for the final against Ajax Amsterdam in Madrid, Spain, May 28.

The teams were tied 0-0 at half-time.

Bobby Charlton, 31, sparked the English team to desperate attempts to try to save the game, scoring in the 75th minute.

Alarm Didn't Scare Unknown

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — The burglar alarm sounded at the Colonial Country Club Thursday just as an unknown Californian came up to the 18th green to steal the first-round lead in the National invitation golf tournament.

Chuck Courtney moved to the front after 18 holes of the $125,000 tournament, scoring 66 on the 7,175-yard, par-70 course.

"If I'd made that putt on 18, I'd really have felt like a thief," quipped Courtney in reference to the ringing alarm.

Courtney's big round missed the competitive course record by one stroke. He goes into today's second round with a two-stroke lead over Jack Nicklaus, Billy Maxwell and Dick Crawford, all with 68s. Bob Charles of New Zealand, Dave Stockton, Miller Barber and England's Tony Jacklin followed at 69.

CANADIANS FAR BACK

Two Canadian entries, George Knudson and Al Balding, both of Toronto, were over par. Knudson collected a pair of 37s for a 74 and Balding finished nine strokes off the pace at 75.

Courtney had five birdies, including three in a string of four holes Thursday.

He opened with a seven-foot birdie putt on the first hole and saved par with another seven-footer on the second hole. He birdied the fifth hole from 15 feet, missed the green on the ninth, but chipped to within six inches to save par.

Courtney joked about the burglar alarm incident.

"It was a concession stand by the 18th green," Courtney said with a laugh.

"It went off just as I was about to make my first putt. I missed it, but really, it wasn't that loud and it didn't bother me."

Early Great, Joe Malone Dead at 79

MONTREAL (CP) — Joe Malone, 79, whose seven-goal performance in a game in 1920 still stands as a National Hockey League record, died at his home here Wednesday night.

He was one of the scoring greats in the early years of the NHL and played for four different teams — Waterloo, Hamilton, Quebec and Montreal.

While with Quebec Bulldogs Jan. 31, 1920, he fired seven goals to lead his team to a 10-6 victory over Toronto St. Pats.

His seven goals in one game, three of them in two minutes, has not been surpassed in the NHL.

Malone was named to the Hockey Hall of Fame in June, 1950.

'AS READY AS CAN BE . . .' . . . FOR PREAKNESS

Sizzling Workout by Prince

BALTIMORE (CP) — The experts are either convinced that Majestic Prince, the adopted pride of Canada, is a wonder horse or they're reserving judgment until after the Preakness Saturday.

The big three-year-old chestnut posted two records in a Wednesday morning romp at Pimlico race track.

The Prince, owned by Frank McMahon of Calgary and Vancouver, covered four furlongs in 45 seconds, a fifth of a second off the world record, and completed five furlongs in 58 seconds.

Pimlico's four-furlong track record is 47 2-5 seconds and the five-furlong mark is 58 1-5.

Trainer Johnny Longden, a former Tabor, Alta., resident who purchased the thoroughbred for McMahon for $250,000 as a yearling, said the unbeaten colt could have gone faster if he hadn't been forced to hold him back when a horse in front started to weave.

"He is as ready as a man can make him," for the 1 3-16-mile Preakness, he said.

Majestic Prince will meet seven other three-year-olds, including Rokeby Stable's Arts and Letters, the Derby runner-up, and Top Knight, owned by the estate of Steven B. Wilson, winner of the Flamingo and Florida Derby but a disappointing fifth in the Kentucky Derby.

The field, in order of post position, and the jockey assignments:

1. Top Knight, Manuel Yeaza; 2. Caption Action, Kenny Knapp; 3. Glad's Flame, Robert Wilson; 4. Jay Ray, Earlie Fires; 5. Majestic Prince, Bill Hartack; 6. Arts and Letters, Braulio Baeza; 7. Al Hattab, Ray Broussard, and 8, Greengrass Greene, George Cusimano.

Each will carry 126 pounds.

Post time is 2:40 p.m., PDT, for the richest of the Triple Crown races which, if all eight start, will have a gross purse of $182,000, with $129,500 to the winner. The race will be televised from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Breaking loose for five runs in the first inning, Red Lion were ahead 7-5 at the bottom of the third, and then went on to score five more runs while stopping Langford cold.

Tom Sloan, Red Lion's heavy-hitting shortstop, picked up three hits and drove in four runs for the winners, while Doug Boden led Langford with three-run homer in the bottom of the first inning.

Sallaway Sparks Independent Win

A mid-game explosion at the plate fired Independents to a 13-5 victory over Gorge Thursday night in Senior Amateur Baseball League play.

Unbeaten in six games so far, Independents fell behind 1-0 in the first inning against Gorge, bounced back for a two-run lead in the second, and ran wild for seven runs in the third inning.

The win moved Independents 1½ games in front of second-place Greaves and Transports, and continued the clubs headlong undefeated charge at the front of the league.

Pitcher Tom Sallaway sparked the Independents, spacing seven hits while striking out 12 batters. He also scored two runs himself and drove in four with a single and a double.

Success Stood In Long Queue At Track Meet

By STEVE HUME

There were 15 heats in the girls' 100 yards, four high-jump pits operating simultaneously, and a lineup for the long jump that looked like a war-time queue at the rations counters.

Over 400 young athletes—age limit restricted to under 14—jammed the field, track and grandstands at Centennial Stadium Thursday for the All-Comers track and field meet.

It looked like Dantesque chaos, but Ed Fougner and the adminstrating Victoria Track Club ran the small-fry through their events smoothly, efficiently and surprisingly quickly.

The meet, designed to boost track and field enthusiasm among competitors under 14 and in the elementary schools, was an uproarious success as 25 schools from the lower Island entered runners and jumpers.

LEADERS NEEDED

"This facility should be used like this every week," Fougner said. "The enthusiasm is there, the only thing we're short of is people with enough time to run more of these things."

While he talked enthusiastically, Oak Bay was busy running up a narrow eight-point win over Central, as Glanford and Shoreline worked toward a tie for third place.

Grant Boland led the Oak Bay squad with a triple-win performance that netted more than half his team's points. He won the 100, then flashed to an extremely quick 25.7 time in winning the 220 before wrapping things up with an 18-foot, 4¼-inch leap that won the long jump.

On the distaff side, 13-year-old Rosemary Daggett of Central bounced 4'7" to equal an Island record for bantam girls that she set a week ago.

Miss Daggett's jump was only three inches short of the boys' best effort.

Gibson's Timely Blow Drops Telephones 6-3

B.C. Telephone continued to founder in last place Thursday night following a 6-3 loss to Colwood Inn, who moved into a share of second place in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League standings.

Colwood led 3-2 at the bottom of the sixth, and it looked like B.C. Tel might be moving in for its second victory of the season when two batters were quickly retired after Al Graham's single.

But Pete Songhurst and Ray Mellings cracked out a pair of singles, and Jim Gibson brought home the bacon with a double.

B.C. Tel was held to a single run in the bottom of the seventh.

Rifles Deadly On Firing Line

Lop-sided scores marked the opening of the five-team Victoria Women's Softball League at Central Park and Colville Road Thursday night.

Molson Vicettes started with an expected 4-0 win over Cantin's movers at Central, as Dodie Skaife, who commutes from Cobble Hill, pitched a four-hitter.

Angie Radanovich of Nanaimo cracked out a first inning double for Vicettes to ignite a three-run surge.

At Colville Road, Queens Own Rifles scored 10 runs in the first inning, added 11 runs in the third, and ended with a 29-1 rout of Tillicum.

'BELLIES CLINCH SERIES

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — New Westminster Salmonbellies scored their third straight victory in pre-season exhibition lacrosse Thursday when they whipped Vancouver Carlings 15-9 before 800 fans.

Outhustling a young Vancouver club, the defending champion Salmonbellies took a 4-3 lead at the end of the first period and were ahead 11-6 going into the third.

Vancouver netminder Don Hamilton put up a great defence when he stopped 44 shots as against 34 for Salmonbellies' goalie Skip Jolly.

Salmonbellies' marksmen were Al Lewthwaite, Mac Tyler and Jim Giles, with two goals apiece, followed by Dave Matheson, Steve d'Easum, Paul Parnell, Larry Henry, Dave Tory, Ken Oddy, Bill Wilkes, Ed Goss and Ray Bennie, all with singles.

Bob Salt and Gordie Frederickson shared six goals for Vancouver.

Turbine Noises Hushed

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — The jet stream of controversy that followed turbine cars to the Indianapolis 500 in 1967 and 1968 has fallen off prior to this year's race.

The reason is simple. Hardly anyone thinks the only turbine entry has a chance.

Unless there's a major surprise, the race for the pole position figures to be between turbocharged Ford and turbocharged Offenhauser engines.

Mario Andretti, in his Andy Granatelli STP Special with a turbo-Ford engine, pushed the top lap speed to 171.657 miles an hour Wednesday in practice.

Jack Adams of Memphis, Tenn., owner of the only turbine among the 94 entries, said Wednesday after the car turned its fastest lap of the year, at 157 m.p.h.: "I think we can get about five miles an hour more out of it and qualify."

Granatelli, whose turbine cars came close to winning the last two years, commented on Adams' optimism by asking:

"How? If the car can reach 162, it will be a great tribute to Jack Adams and his crew. But, in all due respect, I think it's impossible."

Al Miller, 45, is driving the Adams turbine. Another car, with a turbocharged Offenhauser engine, also is available for Miller.

"But I hope I can make the show in the turbine," Miller said Wednesday. He thinks the engine has a better chance to go the distance, despite the failure of Granatelli's car.

Clearing the Decks for Action

This weekend, the waterways will come alive with boats of all descriptions as a mass migration of holidayers deserts the hot pavements — and the parades — for the solitary bliss of a secluded anchorage, or the gaiety of a club cruise, or a sociable rendezvous with other yachting friends.

Hewett

The weekend calendar of activities illustrates why boating is becoming a major recreational sport in this area. A main factor is the many good marina and marina park facilities within a few hours' cruising range (even for a sailboat). This in effect can convert every warm-weather-weekend into a "mini-holiday" as the scope for a different place every time is virtually limitless.

Montague Harbor Marine Park on Galiano Island is one of the more popular havens for weekenders. And at least three different groups will be heading there this weekend.

The Victoria Canoe Club will load canoes on car tops and travel by ferry to the Montague Campsite. There, they'll pitch tents for a base headquarters, and make short, casual paddling excursions along the shoreline, and exploring the island trails.

Cal 25's from Victoria, Duncan, Nanaimo and Vancouver will also make Montague their fleet headquarters, with a salmon barbecue one of the main holiday attractions.

Vancouver's Viking Sailing Club also plans to converge upon the Montague moorage. (Which should make quite a crowd right there!)

★ ★ ★

The Victoria Outboard Club will travel farther north to Telegraph Harbor on Thetis Island. VOC'ers are the most active cruising organization in Victoria, with a cruise calendar set up for a club trip every other weekend. Their jaunt to Telegraph will coincide with low tides for clam digging, and, as their newsletter reports: "beach party, hot dogs, etc. and Sing-Song?" Returning Monday, they'll stop off at Crofton Beach for a swim.

Royal Victoria Yacht Club sailors will race to Bedwell Harbor for the first part of a three-day club cruise. At stake will be the Crease Trophy for C classes and the Max Young Trophy for D class. RVic Power boaters will compete for the Irving Cup. Highlight of their weekend will be a dinner Saturday for families and friends at Birdseye Cove's Mai Tai.

The Cub sailboat fleet will take advantage of the three-day holiday to hold an international team racing meet.

★ ★ ★

Those with less than the weekend to spend can flip across to Roche Harbor on San Juan Island, or "anchor out" at Sidney Spit Marine Park, and a host of other bays and "Gunk Holes."

Whatever the destination, you can be sure that the weekending yachtsmen will return with a full quota of tans and "tall stories" of the fish that got away and the fun that didn't.

THREE VISITING TEAMS IN SOCCER TOURNEY

Four teams from four areas will compete at Hampton Park Sunday and Monday in the annual Colony Inn invitational soccer tournament.

In Sunday's opening match, the host Colony Inn squad will tackle Sons of Norway from the Vancouver and District League's Third Division, at 1 p.m. That game will be followed by a clash between Nanaimo O'Keefe's and Port Alberni Teachers, both champions in their own leagues.

On Monday, first-day losers will meet at 1:30 p.m. and the winners will battle in the championship match at 3. At stake in the final game will be the Peter Paul Trophy, currently held by the host squad.

OUTBOARDS

When you're running through water that might conceal rocks, stumps or other obstructions, and you have an outboard equipped with a shear pin, you worry. Because when your propeller hits an underwater obstruction hard, your shear pin snaps. Then you don't go anywhere—until you replace that pin.

Mercury outboards have a shearproof drive instead of shear pins. We attach prop to driveshaft through a live-rubber safety clutch that "gives" when you hit something—then resumes running.

Even more security: Mercury's one-piece driveshaft housing and one-piece lower unit provide rugged, lightweight, streamlined castings. No nuts, bolts or gaskets to loosen or leak—water stays out, lubricant stays in.

Our new '69 Mercs go a long way to keep you out of trouble. Stop worrying . . . come in and be convinced.

Extremism Big Danger

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government's official languages bill was presented to the Commons today as an effort to steer the course of Canada's future between the dangers of two forms of extremism, either of them capable of splitting the country in two.

Opening debate on second reading of the languages bill, Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier warned against what he called "two facts of one and the some thing, separatism."

For one extreme group, Pelletier said, "it is inconceivable that a country where two languages are spoken could ever achieve a satisfactory degree of cohesion and unity."

This leads me, he said, to the conclusion "that French-speaking Canadians, at least those who live outside the province of Quebec, must accept, must even seek, rapid and final assimilation."

The opposite and "equally intolerant" form of extremism, the secretary of state said, sees Canada as "made up of two communities so different from each other and so completely devoid of common interest that no central government could represent its citizens as a whole."

Both camps, he said would condemn to oblivion English-speaking residents of Quebec and French-speaking residents of other provinces, and both views "would sooner or later entail the falling apart of our country."

In contrast, Pelletier called the languages bill "a gesture of faith in the future of Canada."

He gave high priority in his speech to attacking "erroneous interpretations" of the bill.

"In the bill," he insisted, "there is no question whatsoever of forcing English-speaking persons to learn French, or of imposing the use of English on French-speaking persons."

He said the purpose of the bill was not to regulate the language people speak, but to make sure that they could deal with the federal government and its agencies in their own language.

VICTORIA, B.C., FRIDAY, MAY 16, 1969 —PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

Some evening soon, Louis or Marcelle Delesalle will lift the receiver from a ringing phone and hear a young voice on the line.

The caller will ask, "Is it okay if we bring someone out?"

Unless the hospitable Delesalles already have overnight guests, one or other will answer the question with a yes.

A few minutes later, a car will pull up in front of their pleasant home at 865 Kindersley.

One of the two in it will be a Cool-Aid staff worker, the other a boy for whom the rescue service is unable to provide sleeping space in its dormitories.

This next guest will be the eleventh to land on Mr. and Drs. Delesalle's doorstep. He will be given a room to sleep in, home-cooked meals, and unquestioning kindness.

He may stay for one night or several, and weeks later, there's a chance that he, or possibly she, may write a thank-you letter from some other town.

Ex-RCN bandsman Delesalle and his wife are one couple of a dozen or more who have been housing the Cool-Aid overflow.

Like the others, they are volunteers, motivated by the kindness that is part of them, and by a conviction that no young wanderer should be left without a place to lay his head.

★

It surprises me not at all that they should be sharing their family life with youthful strangers. They have been doing so for many years.

Once when I called at their house, they were entertaining a batch of servicemen from the Centennial Tattoo. Any number of kids have been made free of the gymnastic equipment with which their place abounds.

A skilled flautist, Louis has taught many a Victoria student to play the flute, and refused to accept a nickel for his pains.

I asked these two the other day what they thought of the rovers, strays and castaways whom Cool-Aid occasionally asks them to take in.

Marcelle Delesalle gave me a prompt answer.

"They were really nice young people. Some were long-haired and some were short-haired, and not one of them gave us cause to wish we hadn't asked them out."

And from Louis: "When we started this, we were a little dubious about the effect on our two sons. We needn't have worried."

All the Delesalles ask of their visitors is a first name . . . "So we'll have something to call them." Sometimes after the initial strangeness wears off, last names are offered, along with other details.

★

"Some of them are out to see the country," Mrs. Delesalle said. "Most are looking for work. The youngest so far was about 17. Others were 18 and 19. None of them were runaways, or in trouble with the police . . . the Cool-Aid people were very clear about that."

The most impressive fact about them was that they appeared to be more concerned about people than things.

To a Victoria pair who are far from being starry-eyed sentimentalists, the sum of these encounters is a rewarding experience. They feel it has deepened their insight into youth's problems and aspirations.

Though they seek no reward, they have gained one.

Their sons have received sound council from young men not so much older than themselves. They have been warned away from drugs by those who have used drugs and given them up. The spurious glamor of the motocycle gang has been exploded for them by a guest who spoke from precise knowledge of one such gang.

What Louis and Marcelle Delesalle have taken on is no task for the moralizers, the self-righteous or the prejudiced.

But, like the Cool-Aid operation itself, its a job that needs doing in this city — and good luck to those with the compassion and courage to undertake it.

Ferries Crisis Ends As Parity Granted

Sunday Walkout Averted

A meeting here this morning defused a ticking time bomb which threatened to explode into a ferry strike on Sunday.

Representatives of both the government and some 1,000 licensed and unlicensed ferry personnel told reporters after their meeting that the wage parity issue had been resolved.

Norman Thornber, agent for some 600 unlicensed British Columbia Ferries seagoing personnel, said the nine-day-old "work to requirements" decision by union members would be "suspended immediately".

Letters to him and licensed personnel representatives from Civil Service Commission chairman Dr. Hugh Morrison resulted in ending the crisis which began May 7 when an ultimatum by the unions passed without government response.

The unions demanded a written undertaking that their current wage parity with non-government ferry workers on this coast would be maintained this fall.

The B.C. Ferries employees achieved parity with their private industry counterparts when they shared in the April 1 general increases to all provincial civil servants.

But, they pointed out, the unions representing private ferry workers were negotiating now for further wage increases this fall and they demanded assurances the government would match these.

TURN TO WALKOUT

Although no official announcement was made, it was rumored the government ferry workers were preparing to turn their "work to requirements" protest into a walkout Sunday just before

NORMAN THORNBER
. . . back to normal

Premier Bennett was to board the Queen of Prince Rupert at Kelsey Bay for a northern trip.

Dr. Morrison told the Times after the meeting with union representatives that the difficulty had involved an interpretation of the previous agreement relating to wage parity.

"The treasury board has advised us that they agree with the marine branch's suggestion that there could be a wage adjustment under that agreement — depending on the outside contracts, of course — so we are aiming for an Oct. target," said Dr. Morrison.

(Premier Bennett is chairman of the treasury board.)

MAINTAIN PARITY

"We had word this morning that parity in wages on a year-round basis would be maintained and we expect a further wage increase October 1st of this year," Thornber told reporters.

He said it was impossible to predict how much the increase would be because it would be tied to the outcome of three separate contract negotiations now under way in the private ferry field.

"We anticipate and sincerly hope that this will establish a pattern we can follow in the coming years so we don't have to go through this continuous battle over wages every year," he said.

The agreement may spur efforts by the 12,000-member B.C. Government Employees Association in its battle to obtain supplementary increases for various classifications who were unhappy with the size of their April 1 wage boosts.

But there was no immediate comment from the main civil service union.

'HE HIT HIGH SPOT IN HIS GENEVA PLAN'

A role for Victoria as the "New Geneva of the Pacific" was warmly received by the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club Thursday night.

"It was really, really good," said club president Mac Harris after James McCrossan presented his views on the city's future potential.

"It was very well received. He hit the high spot when he said that in time, or if we work at it, Victoria will be something like Switzerland."

McCrossan, a former British advertising man, who now is public relations director for Goodwill Enterprises, wants Victoria to become a centre for international agencies, conferences and company head offices "to blossom in the perfect environment for living".

The aim would be a new role for the city, other than a graveyard for the old and the heavy emphasis on civil service employment.

Wife Slayer In for Life

Shows No Sign of Emotion As Sentence Handed Out

A Victoria man was sentenced to life imprisonment Thursday afternoon on a charge of shooting his wife to death in their bedroom early March 15.

William Clifford, 66, showed no sign of emotion when a jury of three women and nine men returned a verdict of guilty in Assize Court at 4:17 p.m.

Clifford was convicted of the non-capital murder of his wife Edna, 63, at their home at 1001 North Park.

Mr. Justice Thomas Dohm told him he had no alternative but to sentence him to life imprisonment.

In his 90-minute address to the jury, Mr. Justice Dohm said if they accepted that Clifford was so drunk he didn't know what he was doing, they could find him guilty on the lesser charge of manslaughter.

REASONABLE DOUBT

Defence counsel Foster Isherwood said there was no direct evidence as to who shot Mrs. Clifford.

"I say to you there is a reasonable doubt," he told the jury.

Isherwood said the testimony of Mrs. Ann Adams, who spent a night with the accused before the shooting, was "rather confused."

"She doesn't even remember the name of the hotel they stayed in," counsel said. "The two bottles of whisky and two cases of beer they consumed would make them both pretty high."

Isherwood suggested that the testimony of Clifford's son, James (34), was "colored" by his deep admiration for his mother.

'RESTRAINING ACTION'

James had testified that a physical encounter which took place between himself and his father before the shooting was "only a restraining action."

"But a 15 to 20-minute fight was quite long to be just a restraining action," Isherwood said.

Crown prosecutor Walter Anderson said there was no proof that Clifford did not remember shooting his wife.

"There was no evidence to that effect in the witness box," counsel said.

Clifford did not give evidence during the trial. Defence counsel Isherwood said it was evident he had been drinking heavily and knew "nothing whatsoever of the shooting of his wife."

The trial lasted four days. Crown counsel Anderson was assisted by David R. Wilson.

Campers Urged Use Caution In Forests

The fire hazard on southern Vancouver Island is expected to rise from the present moderate to high levels over the holiday weekend bringing urgings for extra caution by campers and hikers.

One major fire battle is still under way in the area, more aren't wanted, said Vancouver distict forest protection officer Don Owen today.

"The situation is about normal for this time of year and although we haven't thought of any closure we have cancelled a few slash-burning permits because sufficient caution wasn't exhibited," he said.

DRYING OUT

"But with the number of people who will be going into the woods this weekend considerable care must be exercised because all the greenery hasn't come up yet and there's still a lot of dry material on the ground which could start a flash fire."

Owen said the sunny weather of the last few days has added to the hazard by drying out lower elevations even though snow still exists at the 2,500-foot line.

He reported a 150-acre blaze on the west side of Cowichan Lake was "quiet" this morning.

The fire broke out Thursday afternoon in Crown Zellerbach Nitinat working division.

The first sorties of the season were flown by the big water-bombers—a Mars and a Canso—to contain the outbreak and 150 men with tank-trucks were deployed around the fire's perimeter.

Owen said a number of small spot blazes also were reported in other logging operations on southern Vancouver Island indicating increasing dryness in the woods.

IN THE MIDST of final preparations for their annual exhibition the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce Thursday elected Stan Wallis president for the 1969-70 term. He succeeds Lorne Whyte. Others named to the executive include Gary Weir, first vice-president; Jack Purcell, second vice-president; Norm McLaren, secretary, and Meron Simpson, exhibition director. Jaycees are busy supervising the installation of exhibits at the Memorial Arean for the fair which opens Monday. (Jorgen Svendsen photp.)

Red Scum, Fallout Blamed For Deaths of Cattle Near Mill

By ED GOULD

Dairy farmer Henry Bonsall of Westholme blamed air and land pollition from nearby Crofton Pulp and Paper Limited for the death of six of his purebred Holstein cattle since August.

Bonsall, 45, has lived on the 106-acre property all his life but pollution from the mill now is worse than it has ever been and it's getting worse still."

He said he had sent samples of red scum taken from a slough and deposits of black "fallout" from ground depressions throughout the farm to the department of agriculture.

"The local department of agriculture man (Ken Jameson) said they reported no evidence of salt or blight," Bonsall said.

"I don't care what they call it but nothing grows in that field anymore."

He pointed out a slough of brackish water scummed with algea and soap-like bubbles which backs up from the dikes that ring his sea-level property.

He scooped up a handful of the reddish scum, about half an inch to one inch thick above the black earth. "I don't dare let cattle in this pasture anymore," he said. "I've lost too many in there already."

Bonsall described a cow found near death in the pasture: "Its mouth was all red and its pulse was real slow. The vet told me she had an abcessed liver."

DEATHS OF CATTLE

The cow lived but, "I got rid of her and shipped her out last week."

The cattle deaths were attributed to "causes unknown" by three other area veterinarians, Bonsall said. "Every one of them is afraid to attribute anything to that mill over there. I can't see what else it could be. I never had cattle die on me like that before."

He also showed a matchbox full of black residue which he said he had collected from "fallout" Thursday morning. Some pieces were about one inch in diameter.

"This stuff and the haze from the mill, which shifts with the wind, kills leaves on our rose bushes, clover and field crops," he said.

'RUN-AROUND'

He said the government and the pulp firm had been giving him "the run-around" for 10 years on the land and air pollution. On Thursday, a thick, gagging pall of acrid fumes hung over the area for the third straight day.

"The wind is against us and it sure is a pity on a beautiful day like this," neighbor Frank Blakemore said. "I was gassed in 1915 and this is the worse thing I've experienced since."

Another First World War veteran, Harold Bonsall, 72, who lives on 97 acres he used to farm adjacent to his nephew Henry Bonsall, said he had been "knocked right off my feet" by the fumes from the plant.

"We have to stay indoors when it's like this," Bonsall said. "Anybody whose got chest trouble like me is crazy to go out in that."

'USED TO FUMES'

Dairy farmer Bonsall said people in the Westholme, Crofton area "just seem to have gotten used to this fog of fumes over the last few years.

"Ten years ago nobody gave a damn about pollution but now they are starting to wake up to the dangers of it. But it's only newcomers who visit here that really get upset anymore. I guess you can get used to anything."

Father of three children, he said none had suffered ill health that might have been attributed to the air pollution.

●

PCB CHECKING FARM FIELDS

A government spokesman said pollution control director C. J. Keenan "left immediately for Crofton" today after receiving the complaint about polluted fields on the farm of Henry Bonsall.

Bonsall made the complaint to the Times who relayed it to the pollution control office.

Ask The Times

Q. A stamp was issued in 1961 marking the Colombo Plan. What was this plan? Also, who was Jean Talon? A stamp was issued honoring him in 1962.

A. The Colombo Plan, in which Canada participates, provided economic and technical assistance to countries in south and southeast Asia. Jean Talon was the first provincial administrator for New France. He helped settle Canada by introducing the homestead plan by which men were given land, some animals to stock it, and women were shipped from France to provide wives for the early settlers.

School Needs Younger Person

Olive Heritage, principal at Central Junior secondary school, will retire at the end of the school term.

She said today she was resigning a year in advance of retirement age because she believes the school needs a younger principal.

Victoria Shines in Selection of Favored Few

Three of the six girls chosen from 1,200 applications for postings as guides in British Columbia's pavilion at Expo 70 in Japan are Victorians.

They are: Miss Victoria, Pamela Gillan; Bernice Elva Starr, a Haisla Indian and registered nurse at St. Joseph's Hospital, and Patricia Heaslip, who began working in Abbotsford as a high school teacher last September.

Miss Gillan, 21, lives at 1724 Garnet Road, and is a receptionist-hostess who won the Jaycee crown as Miss Victoria last year.

Miss Starr, 24, came here from Kitimat to take up her career in nursing but also has done some travelling within North America as a United Nations Club member.

Miss Heaslip, 25, is a native of Victoria who entered teaching after graduation from the University of Victoria. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Heaslip, live at 1025 Greenridge Crescent.

The other three girls chosen were Deanna McCrea, 25, a receptionist in Vancouver; Pamela Mahony, 23, an elementary school teacher in New Westminster, and Diana Timms, 25, a personnel counsellor in Vancouver.

The six British Columbia girls will work with a staff of 20 Japanese usherettes at the province's $2 million pavilion in Osaka for about 10 months next year.

They will be trained in Japanese food customs, living conditions and language before going to Japan.

The selections were announced Thursday in Vancouver by Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce Minister Waldo Skillings, who said they "were felt to be the most representative, in every respect, of the young people of our province".

Bulging Mathilda Fights for Figure

By PENNY SAVER

Mathilda was trying to get into her favorite last-year's dress when I came over to call. "The — uh! — trouble with us today," she commented as I dragged at the zipper, "is that — ouch! — things are too — ah! easy for us. Why we don't even slice our bread any more; not that I should eat bread." She tossed a disgusted look at the mirror which was busy reproducing every bulge, bump and strained seam. "Do upzip me, Penny, before I die of asphyxiation." Once Mathilda was back into loose and comfortable clothing we sat down and contemplated the too-tight dress. "The seams are too small to let out," said Mathilda after a while. "Besides it would be much more to the point to let me in. That does it Penny. From now on I am going to work for every bite I eat. I'm going to start baking my own bread — lots of exercise to be got from dough-kneeding. And, I'm going to slice it too — which means I'll have to buy a bread knife. I shall put the garden into shape and walk all reasonable distances instead of taking the car or bus. I promise to be wearing that dress a month from today!"

Within a week Mathilda's regimen had paid off in inches — though not nearly enough — so I gave her an encouragement prize of a cutting board. While greatly appreciated for its' usefullness (she had a cutting board attracted to the kitchen work bench but none she could carry to the table) the board was also admired for its appearance. In shape and coloration it was a great, glorious thistle. This cutting board is one of an English line of boards costing $4.95 each. They seem to be made of a laminated wood with one side finished in a wood-grain for cutting and the other painted. All kinds of shapes are represented and each shape has its own pattern — florals, sheaves of wheat and the thistle I bought Mathilda. These boards are heat resistant so can be used for pot rests when needed.

In Search of a Vase

T'is May (as if anyone needed to be told) and the flower contingents are out in full force. It seems a shame to pluck the tender blooms but they give the coffee table an undeniable charm so I do, ears shut tightly against the tiny cry of vegetable anguish. Once the flower is plucked there arises the problem of where to plunk it. The vase mortality rate in our house is unusally high and the smaller the vase the quicker it goes — or so it seems. Becuase of this I have had a ball pricing bud vases.

I found some beauties at $1.95 each. These are made of ceramic and are shaped like little jugs. There is a wide choice both in shape and color.

For people whose vase mortality rate is low I found some beautiful bud vases made of crystal. One at $3.95 was a tall ewer shape complete with long neck and handle. At $2.95 there was a squat, flared vase that would be just right for violets. (I love violets.) Both these vases have a cut pattern with a star shape centering a pinwheel of lines.

Sports Coats Co-Ordinate Summer Costumes

By FLORENCE de SANTIS

The young are looking at summer in a new way. It's no longer a scruffy sort of season that lies between the fashions of spring and fall. It has its own look now, casual but thought-out.

Summer fashions are made off separates, which proliferate like blossoms popping out of the ground. The one thing that holds them all together is a light coat, a summer coat, that takes to the city or to travel with equal ease.

Many of these new summer coats are based on the car coat, that short, sports-styled fling-over which has always been a favorite for other seasons.

Now they are right for summer in some new fabrics, including Graniteville's Terrapin duck, which is used for two short coats. One is single-breasted, with a contour set-in belt which widens in back. Patch pockets are done with buttoned-down flaps, and a rounded collar can be worn up high or set away.

The other coat is styled like an elongated safari shirt, even to its pale beige coloring. The designer sees both coats worn with short pleated skirts of plaid cottons, or jumpers in the same duck fabric, cotton turtleneck pullovers or short-sleeved shirts, as the weather dictates. Accessories include crocheted berets, racing gloves and knee socks or light stretch rain boots.

Pants seem due to go right on through summer this year. Even if they're not the coolest garb, the young, at least, will wear them anyway because they're what's in. To go with tailored print pants and their ribbed cotton tops, there is a car coat in summer canvas of cotton blend fabric. It has a double-breasted panel front, a belt studded with nailheads and an officer's collar.

While many summer coats are done in this completely sport look, others are styled with a sleek city look. Meant to go over office jumpers and summer pique dresses alike, the city coat is typified in a canvas coat in two colors. Cut straight, with seamed panel accents, the coat has two huge, rounded patch pockets piped in white simulated leather to match the banding that rims neck, front and hem. Like many of the new sport coats, this one is finished for water repellency.

MANY COLORS

Designers are making summer coats in many colors to permit their being part of a total look. The fun is to make up a summer wardrobe of skirts, tops, jumpers, pants and culotte dresses to go with the coat. Imagination is the ingredient that tells when to use solid colors, prints and color contrasts. One much-liked combination is brown, beige and white, especially for city dwellers. The trio is like the basic black of summer, light but taking bright accents of orange print scarves or crocheted berets.

Another combination mixes deep colors, usually associated with fall, and white, as in print pants of wine and white paisley. Top with a coat in natural color or white canvas for the co-ordinated look.

The city-styled coats are often in cocoa or other shades of brown, accented in white. They make it easy to use dresses or separates in the some combination. There are two-piece linen blends, the top in cocoa, the skirt in white, or dresses in windowpane plaids of brown on white. These summer plaids are some of the newest summer looks.

Doctor Speaks — Dr. E. O. Van Tilberg, director of St. Joseph's Hospital addressed a recent meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the hospital. He stressed the need for a progressive care unit for patients being discharged from hospital after a lengthy stay. Such a unit would release more beds for seriously ill patients, he said. More efficient equipment is needed in the obstetrical department of the hospital too. The auxiliary plans a coffee party in June, proceeds of which will go towards these two projects.

Pony Betting Wife Outfoxed Him!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I was a bachelor until the age of 56, and all I can say is that some men don't know when they're well off.

"Lena" (I'll call her) kept asking me for money for the track, so I gave it to her. A hundred here, a hundred there. I never kept books on how she came out, all I know is she said she "lost" most of the time.

Well, four years later, Lena sued me for divorce. She didn't have any grounds, but if she'd have got what was coming to her she could have sued me for assault. We settled out of court.

Now it comes out that while we were married Lena squirrelled away about $25,000. My lawyer says the money is hers. I don't know how he figures. Don't you think I'm entitled to that money?—Outfoxed.

DEAR OUTFOXED: So she "outfoxed" you, and "squirrelled" away $25,000? Maybe you should have consulted a zoologist? You paid a lawyer for his legal counsel, so if he says it's hers, 100 to 1, it's hers.

DEAR ABBY: If more than one mouse is "mice," isn't more than one spouse "spice"? —Darrly.

DEAR DARRLY: More than one spouse is not spice, it is spouses. The noun is bigamy, the adjective—bigamous.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is 16. She "goes with" a boy who's a freshman in a college close enough for him to come home occasionally for weekends.

I found a half-finished letter written by my daughter. It was in plain sight on her desk, and I was not snooping. From it I learned that she had "tried" marijuana and she was writing to say that the next time he came home she was willing to try marijuana smoking with him. From her letter, I gathered that he has tried it, too.

Abby, I am sick over this and don't know what to do. My daughter is not a wild girl and we've never had any trouble with her. I can't forbid her to see this boy, and I don't want her to know I read that letter. Should I just let nature take its course? Please help me.—No Name or Address.

DEAR NO NAME: You must tell your daughter you read that letter, and urge her to resist "trying" marijuana with her boy friend. Your plea may be useless, but you can't just "let nature take its course" knowing what's in the air.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

Don't Wait For Summer

CALGARY (CP) — If you're moving, avoid the period between June 15 and Sept. 15 when everybody moves because school's out.

Bette Malone, a Toronto moving consultant, says the most frequent complant she receives is slow settlement on damage claims. "During the summer months there are so many persons moving that office work gets behind, but persons who want their money don't realize this."

She also warns that the mover's estimate is simply an educated guess and not binding on either party.

The carrier is not responsible for carrying jewelry, money, documents and contents of owner-packed cartons. Nor is he responsible for the time on delivery under shipments of $5,000.

FRAGILE ITEMS

The customer is responsible for supervision at both ends of the move. He should point out fragile items and anything which is to be left on the premises. At this time, mover and customer should agree on the exact condition of the furniture as the carrier makes his notes.

Inspect the premises carefully to be sure nothing is left behind, she says, and at your new home, have the C.O.D. payment ready. Inspect the goods and note any damage before signing the inventory.

Little girls aren't nearly as interested in the scientific details of the circus as little boys the same age. But choosing which of many good things to sample at the refreshment stands takes some consideration. Seven-year-old Stefanie Micksch and her sister, Annette, 5, confer about the problem. Russian Grannies on Warpath Against Wicked Westerners

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Once again Russian grandmothers are on the warpath against wicked Western women here who risk their children's health by dressing them in spring clothes.

Heated exchanges take place dozens of times a day between Western mothers and indignant Russian women in the vicinity of the six or seven residential blocks for Moscow's foreign community.

A Western mother who takes her child for a stroll in the spring sunshine—when Moscow temperatures average 64 degrees—must run a gauntlet of hostile glares and remarks.

Russians, most of whom still swaddle their infants, consider it cruel to allow a small child outside before late June or July in anything less than woollen leggings, sweaters, a thick topcoat and preferably a balaclava covering most of the head and neck.

They also consider it their duty to point out to misguided foreigners the error of their ways, and frequently in no uncertain terms.

EAST VS. WEST

A typical East-West confrontation goes like this:

A Russian woman, in heavy overcoat, gloves and fur hat or head scarf, stops to stare disapprovingly at an approaching Western woman, clad in short skirt, blouse and cardigan, and escorting a small, barelegged Western child rejoicing in the freedom after months of wearing heavy winter clothes.

The Russian woman quickly bends down to touch the child's legs and then declares accusingly: "This child is freezing. Have you no conscience?"

The Western mother, if she speaks Russian, says: "He is quite warm enough. It's very warm today."

The Russian woman, perhaps by now supported by one or two others, replies: "It's quite clear that you have no conscience at all. People like you should not have children. What sort of mother are you?"

If the child is too young to walk and is being wheeled in a baby carriage, Russian indignation may be even greater at the supposed lack of protective covering.

At this time of year Russian infants are still wrapped in several layers of clothing, zipped into a windproof bag and covered with two or three blankets before being put in a baby carriage.

Celebrations Planned For Century-Old Store

A grand march led by two pipers will officially open the Centennial ball planned as part of Eaton's 100th birthday celebrations.

A highlight of the ball, to be held at the Crystal Ballroom of the Empress Hotel, for present employees of the Victoria and other Island stores, will be lighting of a huge birthday cake with sparklers just before supper in the Georgian Lounge.

Another attraction for more than 600 guests planning to attend will be a fireworks display to be set off at 10:15 p.m. from the causeway in front of the Empress. Two bands will provide music for the evening.

Also planned to celebrate the store's centennial is a tea arranged by the Eaton's Employees' Recreation Council for all retired Eatonians living in the vicinity. The Eatonians and members of the Quarter Century Club, about 250 persons, come from all across Canada.

Any Eatonians who have not received an invitation to the tea, which takes place May 31 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Empress Hotel, may contact Mrs. H. Hull in the drapery department.

Pregnancy Grounds Paratroopers

KINSHASA (AP) — The Congo's paratroop program is wafting along smoothly except for one major problem—pregnant dropouts.

About 115 of The Congo's 5,000 Israeli-trained paracommandos are women. Since 1966, when women's training started, 300 have completed the course. The rest have quit for one reason or another—usually pregnancy.

Those who stay say they love it.

Marie-Therese Ngoya, who started jump-training at 13, says now at 15:

"It is wonderful. When I get married, if my husband tells me to quit, I will argue with him, I won't quit."

Maj. Andre-Bruno Tshikeva, commander of the instruction company, says women as a rule make better jump students than men. He told a visitor:

"The women train along with the men and often women pass and men don't. The men ask: "What's all this? and the women can rightly say: "Who's the weaker sex?"

Clubwomen's News

It was announced that the June meeting would be a pot luck supper and bingo.

MOTHER SUFFERS

Circus Subjected To Scientific Mind

By MARJORIE PARKER

Some children should never be taken to a circus, at least not by their own mothers.

Some well-intentioned friend presented my seven-year-old son with tickets to the Gatti-Charles circus which is currently playing in the Esquimalt Arena. Thank you very much, dear friend. Next year, please find another child.

Small Child has a scientific mind. He simply cannot accept anything without first questioning the how, the why and the wherefore. Just try and explain Jack and Beanstalk. The scientific method tears all fairy tales to shreds. And this type of analysis dissolves the self-image of a mother who has just come to terms with the wheel.

While I waited at the school bus stop, I nostalgically savoured the flotsam bits which floated to the surface of my memory. I had loved the circus when my parents had taken me back in prehistoric times.

And I completely forgot about last year's trip. Psychologists suggest that our minds retain only those things we really want to recall; that our memories are selective.

We arrived at the arena just as the show began. I sat back to enjoy the exaggerated frivolity of the clowns. All around us, sticky-fingered children clapped and "oohed" and "aahed" appreciatively as the clowns fired guns. Large guns made small bangs; small guns emitted ear-shattering blasts. As for Small Child he concentrated on a ringside attendant who was manipulating a remote control to trigger off signals on a target. He involved me in a discussion of the type of compressor which would make the noise in the guns.

The dexterity of the jugglers was accepted almost with comment. But then the pair did their thing with blazing Indian clubs. Is there something like lighter fluid inside the clubs? Or maybe they are covered with something that burns!

Mountain Goat or Yak?

We could relax when the clubs were finally put into a metal box because it was obvious, even to a mother, that "there's no oxygen in there and the fire will go out."

A large shaggy, bearded creature trotted into the pen with ferocious lions, tigers and their female trainer.

No, dear, I don't know whether it is a Rocky Mountain goat or a Tibetan yak. (And through grinding molars, "I don't really give a hoot, either.") And yes, Mummy does know that Indian elephants are not quite the same as African elephants, something about the ears, I think. Exactly, I DON'T KNOW!!

After some discussion, we agreed that the wire inside the plush-covered swing used by the Great Oscar must be made of either rubber or a stretchy plastic. How else could it contract and expand like that?

By the way, nice lady with the seals, why didn't the large seal get a turn to do tricks? Didn't he feel badly because he had nothing to do? And, why did the small seal have light brown streaks on his side?

I envied the other parents at the circus. All they had to cope with was supplying money for innumerable tours of the refreshment stands, or submit to being tugged to the bathroom.

I really think it was a darn good circus. I don't know for sure though, ask someone who saw it.

Woman's Tag Should Be Her Own

VANCOUVER (CP) — Women will eventually stop using their husband's name and go by their own out of common sense, says Dora Spence of Vancouver.

"It's all part of the picture," she said. "Your tag has to be your own tag—your thing."

Mrs. Spence, secretary to five judges of the Vancouver county court, previously was secretary to the late A.C. DisBrisay, chief justice of the province.

She recently retired as chairman of the Vancouver branch of Association of Administrative Assistants.

She said women do not want to be an echo—they want to feel that business is a stepping stone, and make their own mark.

The administrative assistant is "like a mother in the home," acting as office coordinator and mapping out the bosses' day.

But usually, Mrs. Spence said, she is not appreciated until she leaves the job—when she is replaced by two women.

Orphans Must Learn How to Stay Alive

By HORST FAAS
Associated Press Photographer

AN LOI, Vietnam (AP) — The Buddhist monk blew a whistle and a swarm of youngsters with shaved heads and wearing fluttering yellow pants hurried from their classrooms into slit trenches.

Without shoving or pushing, they fell in line and crouched low, heads between their arms.

"It's an unusual way to run an orphanage," said Nguyen Van Su, "but we have to do our best to keep these poor children alive when the shooting starts around here."

Su, 44, heads a unique village for 1,630 orphaned or abandoned children.

The village 15 miles east of Saigon was carved from the jungle by Su and voluntary helpers—Buddhist monks and nuns, Roman Catholic social workers, members of half a dozen Vietnamese sects—almost two years ago.

Despite the presence of huge U.S. Army bases, a Thailand army division and Vietnamese outposts less than a mile away, the war is still being fought at the doorstep of the children's sanctuary.

"Every other day woodcutters working in our area see Viet Cong soldiers in the jungle—but we can't tell the Americans because they may start a battle here, and the war could easily spill over into the orphans' village," said Su.

The elders of the orphans' village have written to President Nguyen Van Thieu and the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front, asking both to take the site of the orphanage out of their combat zones for the duration of the war. Neither has replied yet.

Now the only protection for the children is the slit trenches and large signs posted around the village reading "Please Don't Shoot at the Orphans' Village." They are in Vietnamese, English, Thai and Korean.

"The orphans' village serves humanitarian purposes only," says Su. "We do not recognize the divisions of religions or nationalities. We want to give life, to build peace."

THIRD BEST harbor in world is being ignored by government and industry claims Prince Rupert port official. Harbor and portion of city are shown in this aerial photo. (CP Wirephoto.)

Stop Bickering, Develop Port Urges Prince Rupert Official

By DENNIS BELL

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — The chairman of this city's port development commission says industry and government have virtually ignored Prince Rupert as the logical outlet for export of northern raw materials to the Far East.

Joe Scott, chairman since the commission was formed three years ago, said in an interview international experts have rated Prince Rupert "potentially, the third finest harbor in the world."

He said development of bulk loading facilities at Roberts Bank, 20 miles south of Vancouver, has resulted in less emphasis on Prince Rupert as the best port for handling goods from northern B.C. and Alberta, the Yukon and parts of the Northwest Territories."

"We've got a great potential here to become a major world port, but nobody is paying any attention to us," said Scott. "We've got the rail access, the site, plenty of deep water and the Japanese market is 500 miles closer to us than it is to Vancouver."

MILLIONS PROMISED

Premier Bennett has said the provincial government will soon pour "millions and millions of dollars", into construction of deepsea bulk loading facilities here and the installation will eventually "rival the Roberts Bank superport."

But Scott wonders how much of this is "pre-election promises" that will never come to fruition. He said politicians have been talking about turning Prince Rupert into a big-league port since the turn of the century, but it hasn't happened yet.

The commission chairman says the choice boils down to a major overhaul of existing dock facilities around this city of 20,000 on Kaien Island or an entirely new installation on Ridley Island a few miles south of Prince Rupert.

The federal transport department and the Canadian National Railways which owns 80 per cent of the dockside land around the city have allowed facilities to degenerate into "an appalling condition."

"We've got six docks on the waterfront — three of them have been condemned," said Scott. "Today, the city has 1,500 feet less in wharfage than it had 10 years ago.

ROOM FOR EXPANSION

"The railway has had this property for years and it hasn't done a thing with it. Yet it won't relinquish it to us so we can get on with the job."

Scott said he hopes the Ridley Island site will be developed because it allows more room for expansion than the waterfont around Prince Rupert proper, which backs up into cliffs a few hundred feet from the water.

"If Premier Bennett is talking about port facilities that will rival Roberts Bank, there isn't anywhere else to go. There's 900 acres of flat land at Ridley Island and plenty of room."

The provincial government wants Ottawa to surrender control of existing facilities to the city administration and has offered to buy 400 miles of CNR track between here and interior Prince George for the provincially-operated Pacific Great Eastern Railway.

Ottawa has turned down both suggestions.

Scott says he wishes the two jurisdictions would stop bickering over trackage and freight rates and get down to co-operation that would lead to port development.

Dead Mikes Cool MLAs' Hot Air

QUEBEC (CP) — Drafty debaters in Quebec's national assembly now are shut up electronically whenever the Speaker rises to call an unruly house to order.

The idea to close all house mikes except the Speaker's on a call to order was imported from Canada's Parliament.

It was applied here this week, ending a cherished tradition known as "clock-watching."

In the past politicians who wanted to score debating points beyond the rules needed only to turn their back to the Speaker's chair and let 'er rip.

Such rule-breakers could later apologize by saying they were only timing their remarks on the clock at the other end of the house.

The first victim of the new rule was Opposition Leader Jean Lesage.

Mr. Lesage was grounded in the full flight of anti-Union Nationale oratory Wednesday when the rule came into effect.

Other members chuckled as he slumped back into his seat, complaining: "But I don't have the mike. I'm not being recorded."

Five Publications Banned In Purge of Czech Press

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Another Czechoslovak newspaper editor was reported today to have lost his job following a major purge of the liberal press that resulted in the suspension of five publications and the resignation of the editor of a sixth.

The Communist party daily Rude Pravo said Jaroslav Sestak, editor of a Ceske Budovice town newspaper called Pravda, was dismissed for "failing to control the political line of the paper."

Czechoslovak liberals lost five publications Thursday when the writers union weekly, Listy, and the magazine of the journalistic union, Reporter, were suspended indefinitely and three others were barred for three months.

In addition, Ladislav Velsnesky, editor of the labor union newspaper Prace, resigned his post Thursday following criticism of the staunchly progressive stand taken by the newspaper.

Listy, which appeared on newsstands Thursday, apparently for the last time, and Reporter have been mainstays of the reform-minded press since the introduction of the liberalization program in 1968 by former party leader Alexander Dubcek.

Other magazines that displeased the censor were Plamen, monthly of the writer's union, My 69, published monthly by the youth organization, and the weekly Svet Obrazech, also put out by the Journalists' Union.

The banning of the five publications continues a tend of sharp criticism against the liberal press begun by the government after the Warsaw pact invasion of Czechoslovakia in August. This was intensified by Gustav Husak almost immediately after he replaced Dubcek as party leader April 17.

Give your wife the runaround

This one. It will run her around anywhere her heart desires. And run you around $1845. Which is a small price to pay.

While you're figuring, here are some other numbers. 35 to 40 miles per gallon, 62 hp, and 80 m.p.h. They add up to quite a car.

In its price the Datsun 1000 carries all the little attentions a woman appreciates. There are reclining bucket seats, all-vinyl upholstery and padded everything. There are carpets, white walls, a tinted windshield and a cigarette lighter. Plus an alternator, windshield-washers, and an all-synchro four-on-the-floor on both 2 and 4-door models. Extras? Who needs them?

One more thing: the runaround will keep running. We had a professional car-breaker work it over and he couldn't make it quit. He did things to that chic little car that shouldn't be allowed, yet he couldn't break it. So we figure your wife can't either. But if you ever need parts, there are 160 Datsun dealers from coast to coast, backed by a million dollars worth. So give your wife the runaround. She'll love you for it.

DECISION on whether Canada will join U.S. airborne warning and control system AWA, is not imminent although it is under consideration, says Defence Minister Leo Cadieux. Plan is still being researched, may require use of Canadian bases.

'Responsibility Up to Ottawa'

OTTAWA (CP) — Former transport minister Paul Hellyer said today the federal government must assume responsibility for the country's economic climate, including opportunity, employment and price stability.

"If it doesn't there may not be any Canada in a few years," he said.

Mr. Hellyer, who resigned from the Trudeau cabinet last month in protest against its concept of federalism, outlined his own concept in a speech—the first since his resignation—to the Canadian Managing Editors' Conference.

He said he believes some provincial powers may have to be transferred to the federal area to permit it to take responsibility for full employment and stable prices.

The federal government must stake its claim to this area of responsibility "and then it has to perform," he said.

Authority over labor is one area that may have to be transferred, he said. In one recent case a union had turned down a wage increase over two years that was greater than the minimum wage in some provinces.

EXPRESSES CONCERN

Mr. Hellyer said he fears present constitutional discussions will lead to entrenchment of residual powers in the hands of the provinces, with no reasonable way to change the situation. He himself felt the residual powers should go to Ottawa.

The present discussions were dealing with such subjects as reform of the Supreme Court and the Senate, a bill of rights and language bills—possibly because these were the areas in which agreement could be most easily reached.

Division of powers and a formula for amending the constitution were being put off until later.

But Mr. Hellyer said he fears this may lead to "entrenchment of the worst interpretations of the law" and to an inflexible amending procedure.

The evidence is that the country is moving in this direction, he said. No one was expressing a contrary viewpoint.

He did not think Canadians would be wiling to accept a structure which failed to provide adequate housing, planning for urbanization, or solutions to pollution and employment problems.

He himself had felt constant frustration in politics because the constitution was given as an excuse for inaction and failure to solve problems.

Print More Good News, Editors Told

OTTAWA (CP) — Newspaper editors must seek some way of reporting world affairs without getting submerged in bad news, R. D. Owen, president of the Canadian Managing Editors' Conference, said today.

Mr. Owen, managing editor of the Kingston Whig-Standard, told the annual meeting of the conference that the press is getting criticism from all sides, sometimes from people who do not bother to draw a line between newspapers and other media.

"It seems clear that we editors must seek some method of reporting the affairs of this dizzy world without allowing gloom to submerge us in columns of 'bad news.'

"Perhaps the first thing we should keep in mind is to watch diligently for those little sparks of 'good news' which too often gets shoved aside by the urgency of some immediate disaster."

Editors cannot ignore the evil and cruel things of the world but can make an effort to give equal attention to the good news, he said.

NOMINATION MEET SLATED FOR NDP

The Victoria provincial constituency of the New Democratic Party will hold its nominating convention Wednesday at 7:45 p.m. in Oak Bay Junior Secondary School.

Provincial party leader Tom Berger will be guest speaker.

No date has been set yet for the nominating convention of the Oak Bay constituency.

Negotiated Peace Aim Of Federals

HALIFAX (CP) — The federal Nigerian government does not want the Biafran conflict to end by military victory, Maj.-Gen. William Milroy told the United Services Institute of Nova Scotia Thursday.

"They would much prefer a negotiated peace because both sides will have to live together afterwards," he said.

Maj.-Gen. Milroy was Canadian military representative on the international team of observers invited by the Nigerian government last year to observe government troops in action.

He said his four-month tour convinced him few, if any, acts of genocide were committed by the Nigerian troops.

"We were allowed to tour wherever we wanted, and to talk to whomever we wished," he said. "They couldn't have covered up."

Painters Take Big Wage Boost

VANCOUVER (CP) — Members of the Painters' Union voted Thursday to accept a two-year contract giving them a raise of $1.45 an hour on their current basic rate of $3.87.

A union spokesman said the vote among the 1,100 members was almost 3-to-1.

The contract with the Master Painters and Decorators Association also includes better welfare payments, 10 paid holidays a year and other fringe benefits.

Uvic Students Urged to Give More Help to Handicapped

Closer liaison between the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children and students of the University of Victoria was suggested by Fred Tanner, president of the Lower Vancouver Island branch of th Cerebral Palsy Association.

"University students come down to the clinic frequently to observe procedure as part of their education, and we designed the clinic with this need in mind," Tanner said.

"When we were located near Oak Bay High School members of the Spade Club there came down in their lunch hours to walk with the children."

A program similar to this could be undertaken by the Alma Mater Society of the university, he suggested.

"Students could use their spare time to help out at the clinic, or else raise money. I'm sure if they tried they could raise two or three thousand dollars."

"It would help us out tremendously, and it would certainly enhance the image of the university students."

The Cerebral Palsy Association is currently attempting to raise funds without charging fees, he said.

"We're one of the very few clinics that doesn't charge fees. We have two things going at the Pearkes Clinic — special education for handicapped children, partly supported by the Victoria school board, and treatment on a doctor's recommendation.

COSTS RISING

"We've always been proud of the fact that we charged no fees, but costs have gone up, especially with the building of the new clinic," he said.

He said it's not the fault of the parents that the child is handicapped, and asking them to pay all the expenses is a discriminatory sort of thing. "They already have a hardship just in having a handicapped child."

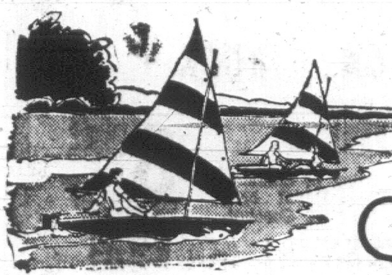
Tanner said he hoped enough funds from the community could be raised so that the clinic wouldn't have to depend on the community chest.

"I don't believe a public fund raising campaign is the answer. We hope people will leave us funds in their wills and estates, and that people who have funds available will want to help us out."

A campaign has recently been started to bring the need to the attention of trust companies and professional people, he said.

Tanner is one of several directors newly appointed for a two-year term. The others are John Bond, James Bryant, G. B. Empey, Mrs. E. W. Finch-Noyes, George Gray, D. A. Hall, Cyril Smith, Mrs. Allan Guy, and John Gordon.

The annual meeting of the provincial association will be held at 2 p.m. May 31 in the Pearkes Clinic.



Good times just naturally go together with Old Vienna.

Ports Expect Busy Season

West, East Coast Terminals Geared for More Activity

By KAREL KRAMER

MONTREAL (CP) — Port managers at Halifax, Saint John, N.B., Quebec, Montreal and Vancouver all predict increased ocean shipping activity and business in 1969.

Guy Beaudet, manager of the port of Montreal, forecasts an increase "in the order of five to 10 per cent" in general cargo, adding that the movement of grain is "far from rosy."

Halifax port manager J. R. Mitchell says the spring and summer outlook "is very good" and if there is any labor trouble at Montreal "we'll be going full blast."

On the West Coast, Bill Sankey of the Grain and Merchants Exchange says: "I don't see any reason for a falling-off. We should maintain a good flow of all commodities."

Why the optimism?

"There is only one cause—increased international business—that's all," says Ray March, executive secretary of the port of Halifax. "When business is up the port is up."

Mr. Beaudet believes the reason is "the economic growth of Canada in general." And he predicts Montreal should get a major share of increased export and import business in Canada.

TONNAGE SETS RECORD

Charles Defieux, veteran Vancouver maritime journalist, says foreign markets for forest products, potash and sulphur are all holding up. "I know of no nation to which we export that is planning to cut back."

Vancouver handled a total of 24,490,320 tons of cargo last year, eclipsing the record 23,000,000 in 1967. The 1968 tonnage figures represent all-time highs for the port, which has increased cargo tonnage annually for the last few years.

Grain deliveries were up nine per cent to 5,439,563 tons from 4,992,270. Gains were also recorded in coal, sulphur, potash and fertilizers. Phosphate rock increased 123 per cent and is becoming a major import commodity.

Wood-pulp exports increased 76 per cent, with the bulk of shipments going to Britain, Europe and Japan. General cargo, however, declined slightly.

The Saskatchewan Wheat Pool has opened a new 5,000,000-bushel grain terminal that brings Vancouver's total grain storage capacity to 26,000,000 bushels.

HALIFAX SHOWS GAIN

Neptune Terminals last year opened a $7,000,000 terminal on the north shore of Burrard Inlet to handle potash shipments from Saskatchewan and coal shipments from Alberta. It plans a $5,000,000 expansion this year.

Halifax also recorded a slight upswing last year, with total cargo tonnage rising to 10,079,884 from 9,363,659. Major factors in the increase were bulk cargoes, mainly crude oil, steel, petroleum products, iron ore, gypsum, salt and molasses. Foreign automobile imports totalled more than 10,000 compared with 4,500 in 1967.

Grain shipments to Halifax declined 4,795,201 bushels to 10,437,281.

Declines also hit the port of Saint John last year, but it went through a busy winter shipping season this year and it is hoped this activity will carry over into the summer period.

Ocean vessels visiting Saint John in 1968 dropped 33 to a total of 469. Coastal vessels increased 49 to 1,875.

Total cargo volume was 5,865,240 tons. Grain traffic skidded to 9,227,858 bushels, the lowest since 1939.

Philip W. Oland, chairman of Saint John's port and industrial development commission, says there are assurances that winter season activity will carry over into summer with a heavier movement of citrus fruits.

Montreal handled 20,895,922 tons of general cargo compared with 20,740,279 in the previous season. But grain shipments to the port declined to 185,758,215 bushels from 249,477,393.

In Quebec City, Canadian Import Ltd. expects to handle 20 more vessels this year than the 375 handled last year. Bunge of Canada Ltd., operator of grain elevators, received 47,000,000 bushels in 1968 and expects about 50,000,000 this summer.

Paul Bousquet, Quebec port manager, says use of the container system is sure to result in increased port activity. CP Rail expects to handle up too 1,400 containers a week when its system gets into full swing in two years.

Total cargo tonnage in Quebec City last year was 6,833,056, down from 7,174,064 tons in the previous year. The decrease was attributed in part to labor unrest.

Container shipping, using huge aluminum crates to cut down on handling time and damage to goods, is also having an impact on eastern ports.

Mr. March says Halifax's future is bright because "economic factors have changed in our favor with containerization, larger vessels and unit trains"—although their full force has not yet been felt in the port.

STRIKE THREAT LIFTED

One of the main drawbacks for shippers using Montreal has been a rash of strikes and labor problems in the port during the last few years. That has been virtually eliminated with the signing this year of a three-year contract with longshoremen that places no restrictions on containers.

Cargo handling at Montreal in the first six months of 1968 was adversely affected by the threat of prolonged and serious labor difficulties. But an active last half resulted in a generally satisfactory year for shipments.

A 24-day strike that closed the St. Lawrence Seaway and a 60-day strike of grain handlers at the Lakehead also affected Montreal.

Handling of containers showed a marked increase over 1967. A total of 14,188 containers were handled last year carrying 120,792 tons of cargo. This compared with 8,183 containers and 76,735 tons in the previous year.

FALCON RULES CHANGED

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Regulations on collecting rare peregrine falcons have been changed so that applicants to the Fish and Wildlife Branch may no longer capture their own falcons, game warden Gerry Paull said Thursday.

Previously, the FWB authorized applicants in a draw system, but this year all birds will be taken by FWB staff and the maximum of 10 falcons disposed of by draw.

Applicants for the draw, sucessful or not, will pay a fee of $200, and must be residents of British Columbia.

WEATHER VANES, once a symbol of farm prosperity, are becoming popular again on British Columbia stock barns thanks to the artistry of Al Hodgins, a retired auto body repairman, who is shown making an adjustment to elaborate vane atop his own home.

Ill Winds Blow Him Big Profit

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Al Hodgins is a vane man with a monopoly who doesn't care if he works every day or not.

Mr. Hodgins has a monopoly in his chosen profession—he makes weather vanes for a living—and says there is more business available than he cares to handle.

Mr. Hodgins got into weather vanes 10 years ago after retiring from a successful auto body repair shop business. He was looking for something to fill his spare time and add a few dollars to his income.

He discovered there wasn't a single person in British Columbia making classical weather vanes any more. So he started turning them out at the rate of one a day — galloping horses, trotting horses, chickens, cows, even full-rigged ships under sail.

Now his weather vanes adorn the pinnacles of barns across the province and in Washington state.

Mr. Hodgins said he takes his time and puts a lot of work into each vane. He charges up to $100 each for the weather vanes and is glad to install them himself.

He admits that today, with broadcast weather reports available to farmers, the weather vane isn't much more than a conversation piece. But he finds that farmers and stockmen like them more and more elaborate in a kind of agricultural one-upmanship with their neighbors.

"It's that easy," he said. "I don't think I'll ever run out of orders."

TRAIN CRASH INJURES 34

LONDON (AP) — An express passenger train collided with a freight train in South London Thursday. A railway spokesman said 34 persons were injured, none seriously.

Kamloops College Approved

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Voters in six British Columbia school districts Thursday gave resounding approval to proposals for a Mainline - Cariboo regional college.

They passed a plebiscite for establishment, maintenance and operation of the college by a yes-vote of more than 80 per cent.

The school board of each of the six districts now will seek permission from Education Minister Donald Brothers to proceed with plans for the college and to join in a formal agreement.

Mr. Brothers will also be asked to appoint a regional college council, expected to take about six weeks.

The vote in Kamloops school district was 62.7 per cent in favor. It was 84.7 per cent in Williams Lake and 89.3 per cent in Lillooet. Other districts voting were Barriere, Birch Island and South Cariboo.

Tentative plans are for the college to be built in Kamloops.

Meanwhile, the provincial government has announced a start on construction of a vocational school at a site on the southwestern edge of the city.

The W. C. Arnett Construction Co. of Kelowna was awarded the contract for land clearing and waterline construction work on the $5,000,000 school.

TV-Leery MPs Get the Message

By KEN CLARK

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal members of Parliament, conscious of the television age, are trying to lose their fear of the tube through television seminars.

Fifteen government members showed up for the first learning session April 29 at the studios of CJOH, the private station in the capital.

The seminar organizer, Tom Goode, freshman MP for the British Columbia riding of Burnaby-Richmond, couldn't make it because of another commitment.

But he says it was a great success. The MP who attended said it was just what they needed.

Mr. Goode, a lanky, 35-year-old housebuilder, says:

"We are just ordinary guys and appearing on television just scares the pants right off us."

PRESSURE INCREASED

Following the first seminar—which took Mr. Goode half a year to organize—the pressure built up for another.

The interest has grown. This time 50 members want to attend. Mr. Goode thinks a third seminar will follow to end the program, which was arranged through the Liberal party headquarters office here.

At the morning-evening seminar, each MP was given a rundown by station personnel on television facilities and the dos and don'ts of appearing on camera. What clothes to wear, for example.

Each MP gave a three-minute prepared speech for the camera and was also subjected to a five-minute interview—also on camera—by television commentators Douglas Fisher and Peter Stursberg.

SAT DOWN COLD

"They just sat down cold and the professionals hammered it to them," Mr. Goode said.

The films were played back with accompanying criticism from the experts for the watching MPs.

Mr. Goode suggests television presents special problems for MPs who naturawly want to avoid looking like damn fools to the folks back home gathered around the living-room set.

"Lots of television interviews are live and there's no chance of reruns," he said. Radio did not present the same problems because you are not seen and if there's a fluff there can usually be a taped rerun. But costly television film worked against reruns when it was not live.

The television-learning venture ran into only minor costs. The station and the guest experts donated their services and facilities.

For the fall session, Mr. Goode hopes to have some cabinet ministers. Some have indicated interest. The handful who signed up for the first one cancelled out because of other engagements.

Tougher Controls Urged for Licences

The Victoria Natural History Society is seeking tougher government control on the issuing of licences to university students permitting them to shoot birds in any season for scientific or taxidarmy purposes.

Members at their annual meeting said there was evidence that some biology students were abusing shooting and trapping privileges.

Allan Poynter, a leading authority on bird life, said one biology student learning taxidermy, was found to be practising the craft almost entirely on owls and hawks. Both species are protected by law.

"Mounted hawks and owls may look attractive," he said, "but it seems to me the student should have confined his taxidermy to pigeons and other domestic birds."

While members agreed that universities strongly support conservation, they pointed out that no study had yet been made on the number of animals, birds and other forms of wildlife killed every year for scientific study.

Botanist Mrs. J. M. Woollett pointed out students, in 1962, collected 7,000 starfish from Long Beach and sent them to various universities.

SKATING RECORD MISSED

FORT WILLIAM (CP) — Morris Nycheck rollerskated for 106 hours and 10 minutes until Wednesday, less than two hours short of what is believed to be the world's roller skating endurance record.

The Fort William youth began his marathon skate Friday night to support the miles for millions program.

At 6:10 a.m. Wednesday he appeared to be "almost asleep with his eyes open," said one of the 50 early-morning spectators. Up to 1,500 spectators had watched parts of the marathon, said Bill Beavis, manager of Fort William Gardens.

Mr. Beavis said Nycheck took 10 minute breaks every two or three hours in the attempt to beat what is believed to be the world's roller skating record of 108 hours, set in 1913 in Australia.

Sponsors of the skatathon will award Nycheck $350 for his effort.

Stain over Old Paint?

Of course Olympic doesn't make a stain for horses. But they do make one that can be used to cover old painted surfaces.

They call it Olympic Solid Color Stain. And it works beautifully.

The reason? Olympic Solid Color Stains contain more pigment. So they go on over old paint easily, without streaking. Olympic covers like paint, yet won't crack, peel or blister. And you get a complete range of colors, too.

Unusual product? We think so. Try it. We think you'll agree it's a horse of a different color.

PROMPT CROSSING ACTION

LAKE COWICHAN — Prompt action by E and N Railway followed a request from village council to improve a crossing on South Shore Road, says clerk Bill Chappell.

Chappell said work commenced the day after he contacted the railway superintendent and was completed Thursday.

The job entailed removal of an E and N track and a Western Forest Industries track and the raising of a third track 18 inches.

The work was the joint effort of village council, railway, Western Forest Industries and the highways department.

'Council Not Bulldozed Into Decision'

DUNCAN — A new full-time fire chief to direct the city's 30 volunteers is expected to be announced at the next meeting of city council, Ald. Dick Benzies said Thursday.

Benzies, chairman of the fire protection committee, said interviewing of six finalists, including volunteer chief Vern Jones who also applied, will wind up Saturday.

The interviews are being conducted by Mayor Jim Quaife and Ald. Jim Saunders. Fifteen applied for the job.

Benzies refuted a charge by Ald. G. A. Kerr at a council meeting that the council was bulldozed into hiring a full-time chief or face a walkout by the volunteers.

He said the decision to hire a full-time man was because Duncan had grown large enough to support one and "the volunteers in the past have found it more and more difficult to devote time to the ever-increasing administration of the department."

Benzies said the city has one of the best fire ratings in the province with a volunteer fire department.

"Incormation from the fire underwriters' association indicates that the present rate would be maintained with a full-time chief," he said.

90 Graders In Contest

The 38th annual contest for the B.C. coast lumber grading championship will be held at the Victoria sawmill division, B.C. Forest Products Ltd., June 14.

The contest is sponsored by the Council of the Forest Industries of British Columbia and will attract 90 entries from sawmill on Vancouver Island, the lower mainland and the Fraser Valley.

Each entrant must have a current grading ticket. A grading ticket is issued for the first time only after a person has attended lectures and passed both written and practical tests.

It is renewed annually on completion of a written examination.

As part of the coming contest a three-hour written test will be held June 7 in the local area of each contestant.

On June 14, at Victoria, contestants will check 100 pieces of wood, varying in sizes from two by four inches to 14-inch square timbers. All pieces will have been pre-graded by a panel of judges.

Electric Union Ends Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — A skeleton crew returned to work today at Lenkurt Electric Co. in suburban Burnaby where the 450 employees voted to accept a 31.4 per cent wage increase over three years, ending a month-long strike.

The full production force will return to work Tuesday. The employees voted 247 to 96 Thursday to accept the increase on rates ranging from $2.07 to $3.69 an hour. The union had sought a 29-per-cent increase over two years.

Puffing It's Way Back Into Present

Fifty years of truck logging puffs its way back into the present Saturday with the official opening of the Cowichan Valley Forest Museum.

Displayed in open fields, on trestles crossing creeks and in cool, natural settings under the huge firs of the 25-acre property, the machinery oldtimers get another chance for a moment of glory.

The museum features big wheels used 70 years ago that were pulled by bull teams to drag logs down Mount Tzuhalem to Genoa Bay. "Old Faithful", a two-drum steam donkey engine used for 50 years until pensioned off in 1955, dominates another corner of the tour.

As interesting as the machinery is, the setting charms all visitors. The recreated North Cowichan railway station (top photo) is stopping point for the steam logging locomotives and their variety of loads.

Visitors can ride a mile of narrow-guage railway over fills and under bridges (left) and crossing a bay on Somenos Lake.

Children are encouraged to get the "feel" of the equipment like the youngster (top right) who is riding a railway bicycle.

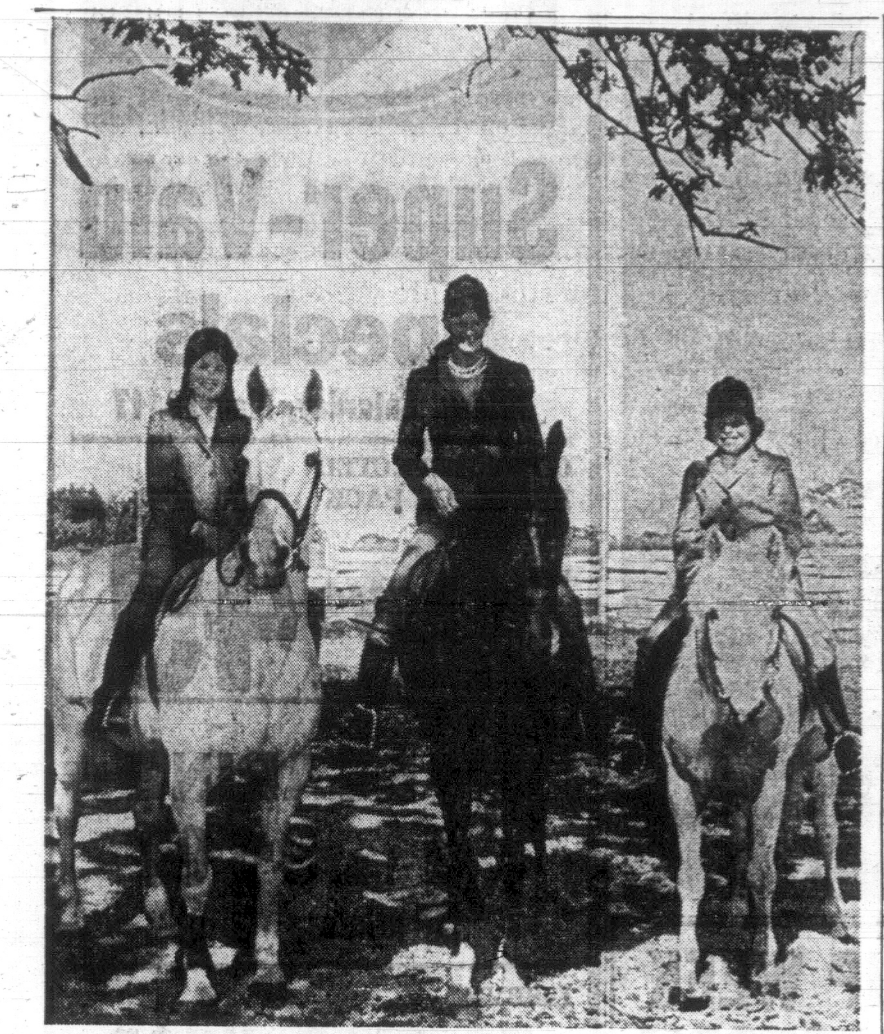
Arts Council to Study Possibility of Auditorium



Two full days of show horse competition are "on the books" this weekend at Victoria Riding Academy — and they will mark the end of an era. with the sale of the academy property to Oak Bay municipality, this year's annual Victoria Day shows will be the last at the Cedar Hill Crossroad grounds. Academy operators Mr. and Mrs. Don Carley are determined to make the "grand finale" a memorable one. There are wide varieties of events in a junior show Sunday, and an open show Monday, both starting at 9:30 a.m. There will be 20 junior contests and 16 in the senior show. Ready for the "fray" in the picture above are three of the academy's young hopefuls, from left, Bryony Litt, on Grey Lady; Kathy Burnham, on Mr. Alibi, and Kathy Campbell, on Freckle. (Times photo.)

The creation of a committee to study in depth the possibility of buiding a large auditorium was unanimously decided at the annual meeting of the Community Arts Council of Victoria at its annual meeting Thursday night.

The decision was made after four principal speakers stressed the need for a major performing arts complex here.

Victoria is the only major city in Western Canada that has no large auditorium facility, said Laszlo Gati, Victoria Symphony conductor.

Because of this lack many of the world's great artists and attractions have written the city off and come no further than Vancouver.

Members discussed questions of the scope of such a building, location, size, its value to the business community and manner of financing.

On the last subject, Gati suggested lotteries. "I'd rather put my money on a Canadian auditorium than in Irish horse," he commented.

Times music and drama critic Audrey Johnson said that with the possibility of a change in the status quo at the Royal Theatre, grave difficulties might arise with regard to symphony performances in the forseeable future.

She favored a performing arts complext that would include many other facilities seriously lacking at the present time and that would mean fullest possible use of the building.

Other speakers were David Hambleton and Rodney Webster.

President A. C. Savage reported that the Arts Council had already sent an enquiry to Canada Council asking for funds to conduct a feasibility study. No answer had been received to date.

Graham Argyle was named chairman of the auditorium committee which will also include the evening's principal speakers.

Officers elected for the year were Clyde Savage, D. H. Hambleton, first vice-president, Mrs. Burton Kurth, second, Mrs. Howard Denike, secretary and R. E. Fisher, treasurer.

Executive director is Thomas M. Sherwood.

TAX RISE TO COVER PENSIONS

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP) — Britain's workers and bosses will have to contribute an extra $936,000,000 a year to cover the cost of increasing the old-age pension by $1.30 a week.

This announcement, by Richard Crossman, minister of health and social security, has stirred comment that the government is putting the strong arm on wage-earners and employers not only to finance higher pensions but to deflate the economy as well.

One newspaper estimated that by increasing old-age pensions next November and adding to other social security benefits, the government will be boosting consumer spending by about $650,000,000 a year.

But since it will be taking more out of the spending pool than it is contributing, the government will in effect be siphoning off about $286,000,000 annually—in addition to the $892,000,000 extra taxation announced in last month's budget.

All this could have the result of slowing economic growth.

The higher old-age pensions, increasing to a total of $13 a week for a single person and $21 for a married couple, become available next November when the increased contributions also become effective.

Currently, pension and other welfare contributions are covered in a flat weekly rate of $2.15 for a male and $1.70 for a female employee with employers putting up a similar amount, in addition to a special employment tax levied against service industries.

Crossman said increasing the flat rate would be a burden on the low-earning employee and that emphasis will be placed on a graduated scheme whereby the wealthier wage-earners will pay more.

Dental Neglect Of Children Reported High

VANCOUVER (CP) — Twenty-five per cent of British Columbia children between seven and 15 have totally neglected teeth and less than 25 per cent have adequate care, the city's dental health division director said Thursday.

Dr. Spencer J. Gallagher said the other 50 per cent are in "that grey area" and have had at least one cavity and been to the dentists at least once. He told the B.C. Dental Association convention that only 13.2 per cent of children in the Vancouver area have ideal dental health.

Another 14.9 per cent have been totally neglected he said.

PUBLIC SHOWS FAITH IN NEWSPAPER ADS

TORONTO (CP)—CBC President George Davidson says Canadians tend to believe newspaper advertisements more readily than they believe the commercials on radio and television.

Speaking during a panel discussion at Holy Blossom Temple Thursday night, he said:

"People have quite strong views about commercials on TV and radio. In contrast, advertising in daily newspapers probably is the most believed parts of the paper.

Nixon to Move Slowly on Court Replacements

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abe Fortas' resignation under fire from the United States Supreme Court gives President Nixon an opportunity to fulfil a campaign promise, but also leaves him the task of removing a cloud over the country's highest court.

Nixon is in no hurry to nominate a successor to Fortas who quit Thursday after a week-and-a-half ordeal—for himself and the court—that started with disclosures he received $20,000 from the family of a man subsequently sent to prison for stock manipulation.

With the court scheduled to recess in mid-June, the president has plenty of time to find a successor, both to Fortas and to Chief Justice Earl Warren, who is resigning next month.

No new justice could act effectively on the court in such a short time. Also, a new appointment following closely on the heels of the Fortas affair might stir controversy.

White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Thursday following acceptance of Fortas' resignation that Nixon doesn't even have a "time-frame" for choosing a successor to Warren.

The matter of replacing Fortas would have lower priority, he implied.

The absence of the pressure of time will allow Nixon to move carefully, both in finding politically acceptable replacements and satisfying public concern about the integrity of the court raised by Fortas.

Both Warren and Fortas were of the liberal wing of the court, which has been under fire from conservatives for its social and racial decisions.

During his campaign last fall, Nixon appeared to join these critics and promised to appoint "strict constitutionalist" judges of a law-and-order frame of mind.

Some of those mentioned recently as possible Nixon choices include Herbert Brownell, former attorney-general in the Eisenhower administration; the current-attorney general, John N. Mitchell; Nixon's secretary of state, William P. Rogers; former justice Arthur J. Goldberg; and two federal court of appeals judges, Henry Friendly and Warren Burger.

But perhaps more important is the appointment of new justices who will still any doubt that the court is a citadel of objectivity and probity.

ACCEPTED FEE

The shadow fell on the court a week ago last Sunday when Life magazine reported that Fortas, shortly after being seated on the Supreme Court, had accepted and kept for 11 months a $20,000 fee from the family foundation of Louis E. Wolfson, a Florida industrialist and former client.

Wolfson now is serving an 18-month sentence for perjury and for obstructing an investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

For Fortas, the affair climaxed a year of bitter disappointment and unfulfilment. Less than a year ago he was nominated to be chief justice only to see the Senate refuse confirmation, partially because of his acceptance of a $15,000 fee raised by businessmen to conduct a lecture series at the American University law school.

His future is uncertain.

"I really haven't given the matter any thought," he said of his future in an interview Thursday night.

"I only hope that I will continue to live a good, full and varied life and do some good for people."

U.K. FACTIONS CLASH OVER SEGREGATION

LEICESTER, England (AP) — A demonstration against a South African trade delegation erupted into a street fight Thursday night, with seven persons arrested for disorderly conduct.

Seven hundred students and immigrants with banners protesting racial segregation clashed with 40 members of a right-wing British movement outside the delegation's hotel. About 70 policemen moved in to keep the rival factions apart.

Shoestring Budget For Films

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Ukrainian-born Walter Wasik of Oshawa is trying to break into the film industry on a shoestring budget. Already he has made two films and is working on a third.

The Cruel Dawn, a story of Iron Curtain freedom fighters made two years ago, was shown to Ukrainian organizations in North America, but not commercially in Canadian cinemas.

The premiere of I Shall Never Forget, about a Canadian pilot shot down over the Ukraine during the Second World War, is set for September.

Filmed entirely in Oshawa and the nearby countryside, I Shall Never Forget runs two hours, in color, with a cast of 38 semi-professionals mostly from Oshawa but with Roma Dolnycky of Toronto as heroine.

During its production Mr. Wasik draped the Bowmanville, Ont., town hall with swastikas and Russian flags, evoking protests from Canadian veterans' groups.

Mr. Wasik said Wednesday the film is intended for general audiences. "We don't want to produce movies for a particular group of people," he said.

He started a company, Canukr Film Productions, but still has to raise enough money to cover production costs.

He said he expects to begin producing his third film, about the pioneers of the Canadian west, later this year, if he can raise the money.

NATURE TRIP SCHEDULED

The younger section of the junior branch of the Victoria Natural History Society will meet on Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at Douglas and Hillside for a field trip to Bear Hill off Centre Road. Jane Moyer and Jenny Singleton will lead the group.

Films Scheduled To Raise Funds For Deaf Society

A Victoria couple, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hubner, 1163 View St., will give four film showings in an effort to raise funds for the newly-formed Victoria Society for the Deaf and Hard-of-Hearing.

The films will trace the Hubner's journey 34,500 miles across Canada and Europe, the Middle East, Russia and the ocean.

Among the shots will be campsites by the Red Sea where they chatted with men on camel patrols watching for smugglers.

The films will be shown Wednesday and Thursday at 8 p.m. in First United Church, and will again be shown at 8 p.m. June 2 and 3 in the auditorium of Oak Bay Junior Secondary School.

The entrance fee of $1 will be given to the society as a donation toward its proposed centre.

Cormorant is scheduled to leave Esquimalt Sunday morning.

Car Strikes Pole, Driver Injured

BRIDGE LESSON

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

If South had known that trumps were going to break evenly he would have had no trouble making his spade game. He also would have no trouble if East hadn't found out a way to misdirect South's thinking.

East won the diamond lead with the ace and carefully returned the five of hearts. South was on lead with the ace and continued by cashing the king. East dropped the deuce and the misdirection had been effected. South felt that West was likely to hold five hearts for his take-out double and East's lead of the five followed by the three spot showed a doubleton and made the probability a certainty.

South still thought he might make the hand against a 5-2 heart break. He started proceedings by leading his queen of clubs and overtaking with dummy's king in order to get rid of his jack of diamonds on the ace. Then he led a trump. West's ace took the king and West led his last club. South, ruffed, led a heart, ruffed in dummy, ruffed a diamond back to his own hand and led his last heart to be ruffed by dummy's last trump. East overruffed and led his last club. South had no way to keep West from taking the setting trick with the jack of trumps.

South could have made the hand in any number of ways. He actually could have made an overtrick after East's heart play at trick two. We blame South a trifle for over-thinking but somehow or other in the backs of our minds we wonder if we might not have been fooled by East's deceptive play.

Some Earned $100,000 And Paid No Income Tax

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — United States government figures show that 381 Americans earning at least $100,000 in 1967 escaped paying a penny of income tax.

But 2,200,000 below the official poverty level—$2,200 annually for a married couple—contributed to the annual income-tax harvest of $165,000,000,000.

President Nixon appears to have had that in mind when he announced recently the first major U.S. tax reform program since income tax was introduced in 1913 at the rate of one per cent on the first $50,000 of income and two per cent beyond that.

"We shall never make taxation popular, but we can make taxation fair," the president said. His program, now embarked on the lengthy congressional voyage that may take two years, is a relatively modest one. It may emerge in drastically altered form.

But it signifies a recognition that the jungle of fine print in U.S. income tax law has provided tax shelters for too many on the high-income side of the American economy.

In 1966, four Americans each drawing incomes of more than $5,000,000 paid no income tax. On record is one individual who had an income of $20,000,000 and paid nothing.

Moreover, evidence shows, the growth has been sharply upward in the numbers of affluent Americans legally avoiding income tax by devices ranging from the oil-depletion allowance to expenses charged against farming operations conducted solely for that purpose.

The president's tax reform plans follow warnings of a general taxpayer's revolt and the finding of one public opinion poll that 69 per cent of Americans feel they are paying too much now.

That sentiment was sharpened April 15 as Americans for the first time felt the impact of a Vietnam war income tax surcharge—the necessity to pay 10 cents more on every tax dollar.

The Nixon program really aims at a reshuffling of the tax burden without altering the harvest—reallocation of something around $4,000,000,000.

Including the 2,200,000 Americans below the poverty line, 35,000,000 Americans earning below $20,000 a year pay half the income tax.

Despite the rule of thumb that the rich shall pay a proportionately greater slice of income tax, the American financial upper crust gets off easy—and in many cases scot free.

PAY LESS TAX

For example, those with incomes of more than $5,000,000 a year pay just half as much tax proportionately as those with one-tenth the income.

There are some special loopholes.

Americans choosing to invest all their income in state or municipal bonds free themselves from income tax liability. The Nixon reform doesn't touch this escape hatch.

Charitable donations loom large in tax-escape calculations.

It has been estimated that the U.S. treasury loses as much as $1,600,000,000 annually in tax revenue from the provision that 27.5 per cent of the income from an oil well is tax-free annually.

The provision, long attacked and adequately defended by the well-heeled petroleum lobby here, may be in for some revisions now, however.

One well-known example of the provision is the oil man who avoided paying any income tax over a 12-year period in which he sold at least $50,000,000 worth of oil.

FDR's Son Stabbed

GENEVA (AP) — James Roosevelt, oldest son of the late U.S. president Franklin D. Roosevelt, was stabbed at his home late Thursday night in a "family quarrel," police said today.

Police said Roosevelt, 61, was stabbed in the back and underwent surgery.

Police refused to say who stabbed Roosevelt but said it "was not likely to have serious judicial consequences."

News Chief Of CJVI Ends Long Career

A career spanning 42 years in the news business ends today with the retirement of Gordie Williamson, 63, as news director of radio station CJVI.

Williamson, who headed the news staff at CJVI for 13 years, will be succeeded by Lorne Cunningham, 29.

Williamson started as a sports reporter with the Edmonton Bulletin and later joined the Calgary Herald. He then joined radio station CFRN Edmonton, where he did play-by-play broadcasts of hockey games and other sports.

After serving overseas with the Royal Canadian Air Force during the Second World War, he was appointed news director at CFRN in 1945.

He moved to Victoria in 1953 and operated a grocery store for three years until returning to radio as news director of CJVI in 1956.

Sub Sinks Five Months After Launch

VALLEJO, Calif. (Reuters) — Salvage operations were started today to raise a nuclear submarine from the bottom of San Francisco Bay after it sank at a shipyard Thursday night.

A spokesman at the San Francisco Bay naval shipyard, on Mare Island at the north end of the bay, said the USS Guitarro sank in about 40 feet of water.

There was no fissionable material aboard the 291-foot-long submarine which was launched in December at the shipyard where it was built.

The vessel, which was not to be commissioned for six months, was in the process of being outfitted.

About 45 workmen, aboard the vessel when it started taking water, got off safely.

There was no immediate explanation for the sinking.

Is It a Bird, a Kite? No! It's An Incredible Space Platform!

By ROBIN BURGESS

It loops, it spins, it zig-zags, it dives and pulls out—or so the package says. It's the Incredible Space Platform and it's bringing high-flying profits to two Victoria buisnessmen.

Research scientist Sergie Condrashoff designed the colorful, foot-square plastic kite with 30-foot tail when he failed to find one that he approved of to buy for his three daughters.

His design turned out so successfully that he and neighbour Frank Annis teamed up to form the manufacturing firm of Condor Industries and mass produce the platform for retail sale.

In 1967, the first year it was in operation, the firm sold 14,000 space platforms in Canda. Recently the company opened a subsidiary in Seattle and U.S. agents estimate 10 million sales there, 25 per cent of the American kite market.

Sales this year are already at the 45,000 mark.

The secret of the space platform's success, according to Mr. Annis, is the fact that as a product it is so well in touch with today's way of life.

"This is the space age. Children of today don't want things that their mother and dad had—like kites. But mention space to a child and he understands."

So the new kite is called a "space platform".

For fathers with no time to assemble kites and children accustomed to our just-add-water-and-stir world, the space platform comes assembled and ready to fly.

"You have to bring out a toy that is instant, . . . we want things to have fun with right now."

Unlike conventional kites, space platforms are easy for the most fumble-fingered father to launch, said Mr. Annis.

RELUCTANT

"Most fathers are reluctant to purchase a kite for a child because of then having to go out and fly it. We see this. One of the first things they ask us about the space platform is 'are they hard to get up?', So we just show them."

It's virtually indestructible", he added and described seeing one space platform fly perfectly after being run over by a double-decker bus.

These features have placed the Incredible Space Platform a product in demand.

"One wholesaler who took twelve gross said he could have sold seven times as many."

Surprisingly, main purchasers seem to be adults.

FUTURE PLANS

"It's the oder people and young adults that are flying them. The young married couples and university students. Many fathers buy them for their one-year-old babies and, of course, fly them themselves."

The Incredible Space Platform' is going to be just the beginning for Condor Industries. Mr. Annis hinted at future plans to expand production.

Damaged Plants Recover

By HILDA BEASTALL

Two happy discoveries were made this week among winter damaged plants. As a reward for restraint with the secateurs, the pyracantha (or Firethorn) has been putting out strong new growths.

Hilda

Several lower branches show small green shoots, while near the base probably a couple of dozen strong growths are coming along quickly.

So rapidly are these growing that within a week, flower buds have developed too, giving us a fine feeling of optimism.

If your Firethorn had been badly scarred, look it over carefully again now. Providing it wasn't allowed to dry out at the roots (against a house wall, for instance) it may be showing signs of recovery.

Dead tip growth can now be cut off. After a watering, put a two-inch layer of compost loosely over the root area, and watch for results.

Don't forget to water again as surrounding soil gets a bit dry.

Only if no growth shows by, say, end of July, would I discard this shrub. It is surprisingly hardy, some varieties more so than others.

The second discovery of the week is root survival of the quite tender Lippia citriodora, Lemon-scented verbena.

This is a woody shrub we take chances on each year but always have kept a few young plants in greenhouse or coldframe over winter as insurance against total loss.

This last winter, no insurance. All plants outside.

No growth has come from the woody branches, but because we neglected discarding the roots, we now have plenty of fine new shoots popping up.

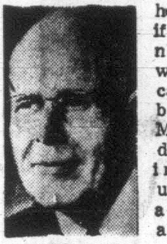
These two discoveries are to encourage gardeners to give plants a chance to recover. Warm sun, enough moisturet in the soil, and Nature has a way of coming back to delight us.

YOUR HEALTH

Heart Murmur Explained

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

There are three main types of heart disease: (1) A child is born with a malformed heart; then, if his blood is not aerated well, he is called a blue baby. (2) Many children get an infection, usually with a germ called a streptococcus, which may grow in their throat, in their joints, and in their heart valves. When a damaged or deformed heart valve doe not close properly, some blood goes whooshing back through it, and the whoosh is called a murmur. (3) In older people the common type of heart disease is called "coronary," and it is due to a plugging up, usually with a blood clot, of one of the big coronary arteries that supply the heart muscle with blood. These arteries are called coronaries, because they go around the corona, or crown-shaped top of the heart.



Alvares

Many heart murmurs are harmless, and this can usually be recognized by an able physician, when the patient has no shortness of breath and can perhaps play a fast game of tennis. The most important fact about the heart is how good a job it does of pumping blood through the body. If the heart is a good pump, the man usually is safe enough.

When I was 17 and started college, a girl of 17 started also, and when she was examined by the college physician he said, "You have a bad heart murmur and so you will not be permitted to take gym." Today she, a great-grandmother, at the age of 84, is still very active and healthy, and her wind, for her age, is good. She has never had any heart trouble. Her mother had the same harmless murmur.

One day many years ago, a man of 70 came into my office to see me about a little arthritis. When I listened to his heart, I heard such a loud murmur that I was almost certain that it must be due to a congenital defect, and he had been born with it. I asked him when it was first discovered and he said, "When I was 20; then four of the best physicians in San Francisco told my wealthy father that I would be dead in six months. So I said to Dady, 'Give me some money and I'll go to Paris and have a final fling.' After a month I got tired of that, and went home to work in my father's factory. I have never had any heart trouble, and I took great pleasure in going to the funerals of those four doctors!" Today with our added knowledge, I am sure the four doctors would have made a better diagnosis.

The normal heart sounds, as a physician hears them, are like "lub-dupp, lub-dupp." When there is a murmur due to a narrowed valve, there may be a preliminary swish, or if there is a bad leakage in the valve, there may be a swish instead of the "dupp" sound.

Betty picked up a mug. "These are pretty," she said. "How much?"

"Three prices depending on color," Sam told her. "The gold are 67 cents each, the blue 61 cents, and the green mugs 55 cents each."

"Fine," Betty nodded. "Give me a selection of all three, five dollars worth in all, but different numbers of each color."

It took Sam quite a while. How many did Betty get?

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Seamen Discovered Prairie Province

By BOB BOWMAN

It is not often that Canadians think of Manitoba as a maritime province, but of course it is with a seacoast on Hudson Bay. In fact Manitoba was discovered by seamen and not by land explorers. Captain Thomas Button spent the winter of 1612 at the mouth of the Nelson River where he led an expedition of three ships including the Discovery that had carried Henry Hudson on his last journey. So many men died during the winter that Button had to leave one ship behind when he returned to England the following summer.

Bowman

Nevertheless, Button was convinced that there was a passage from Hudson Bay to the Pacific and his reports encourated other expeditions led by Gibbons, Bylot and Baffin between 1614 and 1616.

In 1619 Denmark sent out an expedition of two ships led by James Munck. They sailed on May 16 and arrived in Hudson Bay in September when Munck discovered what is now the Churchill River. The expedition spent the winter there and the harbor was called Munck's Harbor until the names was changed to Port Churchill.

Most of Munck's seamen were Norwegians and they almost felt at home, at first. Unitl Christmas they spent their days hunting and trapping and gathered a rich haul of furs. Then scurvy set in, and by spring only Munck and two men had survived. They had to abandon one of their ships, and somehow the remaining three men got the other back to Denmark.

Other expeditions followed and it was not until 1632 that it became clear that there was no passage to the Pacific from Hudson Bay, and if there was such a passage it must be to the north.

Other events on May 16:

1613 — Colonists from France arrived at LaHave, N.S.

1629 — A watermill was built near Quebec.

1762 — New Englanders established first British settlement in New Brunswick at Maugerville.

1855 — Reciprocity treaty with U.S.A. came into effect.

1865 — Macdonald, Cartier, Galt and Brown were presented to Queen Victoria.

1871 — Imperial order-in-council authorized British Columbia to join Canada.

1880 — Dominion Bank Act provided notes no lower than $5 with all notes being multiples of five. Grand Orange Lodge of British North America was founded.

1885 — Last spike of Lake Superior section of CPR was driven at Noslo, Ontario.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a World Book Atlas.

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Ricky Belden, age 9, of Ivanhoe, California, for his question:

What is a horseshoe crab?

Last week, Andy reported that crabs have hearts and explained how they work. But the horseshoe crab is not really a crab at all. True, he too has a heart and in many ways he looks very much like a crab. The earth's animals are classified by boilogy scientists. Let's find out why these experts insist that the horseshoe crab is not related to the true crabs.

He lives along the shores of the salty sea. He has a crusty, crabby shell and he skuttles along on crabby claws. His shell is shaped somewhat like an overgrown horseshoe. Almost anybody would be likely to class him as a crab—a horseshoe crab. Some people call him a king crab because he may be more than two feet wide. This is certainly king-size for a crab. But the experts insits that both his everyday names are misleading. The horseshoe crab actually belongs to a much, much older tribe of animals. His ancestors were here long before the true crabs arrived to live in our salty seas.

If you search along the beaches, you may find him in the shallow water. He has cousins along the Atlantic shores and more cousins around China and southern Japan. When you find him, be sure to notice his long, thin tail. It is covered with crusty shell and along each side it has a row of sharp spikes. It tapers down to a sharp point at the end and altogether this tail may be as long as two feet. The wide end of his horseshoe shell covers his head and chest section. The narrower end is joined to his tail.

If you turn the horseshoe crab over onto his back, he looks somewhat like a king-sized spider. Scientists say that his ancestors were distantly related to the spiders and scorpions. His family history goes back at least 500 million years, before the spiders and scorpions existed. At that time, the seas were populated with many crusty little creatures. But no animals had left the water to live on the dry land.

Sole Survivor

Modern scientists have found countless fossil shells of those ancient crusty creatures. They named them the "trilobites." There was an Age of Trilobites when these fellows were the most advanced animals living in the whole world. This lasted for millions of years. Meantime, the earth kept changing. There were long warm and cool spells, the seas grew saltier and several times vast lands and seas changed places. The trilobites tried to cope with the changes. Some succeeded for a long time. But, other sea dwellers did better. Some became enemies of the trilobites. Others changed themselves to suit living conditions on the dry land. Most of the trilobites gave up trying and perished long ages ago. However, experts suspect that one of them changed himself to cope with the new world and survived right through to modern times. Our sturdy horseshoe crab is thought to be the sole survivor of the trilobites. He seems to be the only living member of his ancient tribe.

scrambles onto a wet, sandy Crab leaves the water and acrambles onto a wet, sandy beach. There she lays her eggs, where the high summer tides will keep them washed and moist. The youngsters are tiny copies of their parents, though they do not grow their long tails until later. Horseshoe crabs are slow and very easy to catch. Lots of them are gathered and ground up to make fertilezers. Others are caught for human food. Worried experts say we may soon destroy them all. After their long struggle to survive through 500 million years, what a pity this would be.

★ ★ ★

Andy sends a World Book Atlas to Ronald Joseph, age 11, of Darlington, South Carolina, for his question:

Can the generation gap be closed?

Every generation was helped along by past generations and lends a hand to future generations. Our parents are only 20 years or so older, so this generation gap cannot be so immense. However, we live in times of exciting changes. And since time began, the youth generation has wanted the best of everything now, right this minute. In 20 years or so, parents have learned that even improvements require planning. They are slow to throw old things away unless they have better things to replace them. The two sides get impatient with each other. They try to explain, but things grow so tense that they seem to be divided into opposite camps. Naturally this generation gap must diminish—because neither side could possibly get along without the other.

BOMB BLAST SHAKES HOME

MONTREAL (CP) — A home-made bomb caused about $1,500 damage but no injuries early today when it exploded at a private residence in Laval, north of Monreal. Laval police said the bomb exploded on a balcony at the rear of a home owned by Lionelo Carboselo.

Markle Quits CBC to Resume Career in U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — Television producer Fletcher Markle has decided to leave Canada again to resume his career in the United States following the recent cancellation of his Telescope show by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Telescope, on the air for six years, is scheduled to wind up Sept. 4. Mr. Markle, 48, said he had been asked to stay on at the CBC as head of the network's TV drama department, but had rejected the offer.

Mr. Markle, who gave up an active Hollywood career six years ago to return to his native Canada, said he turned down the offer because the money was inadequate.

"I don't feel any bitterness about leaving," he said. "That's the way it is in any business, not just TV."

Mr. Markle produced, wrote and did on-camera interviews for Telescope, a show he said had no intentions of being "public-affairs-minded."

"It was popular journalism. We never set out to be a debunking show. In each show we did, there was a certain implied admiration for the talents of the people interviewed."

An established radio writer and producer in Canada, Mr. Markle first left the country in 1946 to join Orson Welles's Mercury Theatre as an actor-writer.

During his 16 years in the United States, he directed more than 500 TV episodes and wrote and produced a movie, Jigsaw. He also directed two other movies, Night Into Morning and The Man With The Cloak.

He married actress Mercedes McCambridge, who won an Oscar as the supporting actress in All The King's Men. Twelve years later they were divorced, and Mr. Markle married Dorothy Conradt.

He will direct several episodes of the Julia TV series in Hollywood, where he is heading to resume his U.S. career.

Mr. Markle also plans to develop a movie property—a Wallace Stegner novel which he bought several years ago.

BIG WEEKEND OF ROCK MUSIC

Electric Circus to Swing on Holiday Merry-Go-Round

By PETER LAWSON

Frank Alexander and the Electric Circus face a complete weekend of rock music engagements.

Tonight from 8 until 12 at Central junior High School the Electric Circus play at a COSY sponsored dance. Cost of admission is $1.

Saturday afternoon the group is performing at the open-air Belmont Park May Day celebrations along with the Peace Jeep and Society's Wish.

Saturday night the Circus is playing an adult dance at John Stubbs High. Admission is $3 a couple with music beginning at 8.

Sunday evening the Electric Circus is holding its own dance in the Purple Onion from midnight until 4 a.m. Dress is semi-formal and the charge is $4 a couple.

Incidently, at the same time as this dance is taking place upstairs in the Club Tango, Society's Wish is sponsoringa beachcomber type dance. The idea of a beachcomber theme is that the choice of clothing is left to the discretion of the patrons.

Monday afternoon Frank Alexander will lead his group on the OBYC float in the parade. Almost immediately following the parade the Electric Circus switches to the stage of the A Go Go at 2.

It is unfortunate other local groups are not being given the opportunities this group has.

•

The Club Tango is host to a trips-festival tonight beginning at 8:30 featuring Moxie and As Sheriff. Price is $1.50 per person with a light show by the Holy Ghost.

The Old Forge has reached the finals in its talent contest held each Wednesday night. Contestants that will perform in the coming weeks will be competing for cash prizes and gifts.

The A Go Go presents and extra evening of music Sunday opening their doors at midnight and staying open until 4 a.m. The Peppermint Cyrcle is playing the extra night with the possibility an out of town group may appear.

New owners of the club have wasted no time in changing the appearance of the A Go Go. Next thing is to wait and see whether the performing band stays there.

Reports are coming in from Seattle, Bellingham, the Interior, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver Island, concerning the interest being put forward for the rock kfestival this weekend at Aldergrove.

•

The number of groups now signed to appear has swelled to over thirty, and may go even higher. They include England's New Vaudeville Band; Seattle's Sweet Roll, Pure Sunshine, Buford, and White Heart; Vancouver's Seeds of Time, Spring, and Mock Duck. Also, acts from Edmonton, Calgary and here on Vancouver Island are expected to appear.

The Jaycee Fair begins another annual fling on Monday following the finish of the parade.

•

Reliable sources inform me that there will be quite a selection of local rock bands. It is surprising to learn this news, after what happened at last year's fair. If you don't remember, the bands had to compete with the barker's cries for money as well as the continual humming of the fair's super-large lighting generator. Maybe this year someone will kindly donate an indoor portion of the curling rink.

BOTTLES

No Returns Cause Land Waste

By ELIZABETH FORBES

You only need to walk along our beaches after a holiday weekend (or, for that matter, in our parks and on our country lanes or bouleyarded streets) to realize that non-returnable beverage containers are rapidly creating a new pollution problem.

Forbes

During the last legislative session, the minister of recreation and conservation received strong protests against the introduction of such bottles. However, nothing was done to ban them.

Now they are being sold in increasing numbers. They are also being tossed from cars and left in parks and on beaches and streets to compound a disagreeable mess and if, as so often happens, they break, to create a real menace.

* * *

Members of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities, meeting recently at Ladysmith, decided to do something about this new threat.

They passed a resolution (presented by Oak Bay council) requesting the provincial government to give immediate consideration to legislation making it mandatory for all beverage containers (bottles or cans) to be made returnable.

The resolution (as passed) also asked that deposit charges be based on a minimum of 2½ cents for cans and five cents for bottles, with a small extra charge on non-reusable containers to cover the cost of collection and disposal.

In the preamble it was shown that the pollution problem created by the non-returnable beverage container is increasing at an alarming rate.

Also that a brief prepared by the British Columbia Nature Council states that where such litter has to be cleaned up at public expense, it costs up to 30 cents a container.

* * *

A copy of that nature council brief titled "How to Beat B.C. Bottle Pollution" is beside me as I write.

In it you find a clear warning that the buildup of tossed away non-returnable bottles and cans is nothing more or less than a new form of land pollution.

It questions the worth of such a prospect for a province "whose greatest asset, if the future be rightly considered, is her wealth of scenic beauty."

Is this "convenience," it asks, worth the ruin of our countryside?

The nature council points out a simple truth: that until the advent of the non-disposable containers, beer and pop bottles created no great litter problem "because practically all that were abandoned were snaffled by the first kid that happened along.

"They had their own built-in collection service, it was easy money for the kids, and the land was better for it."

Now the blight of container litter spreads because this service is largely missing. It must be reactivated, the nature council believes. "The kids must ride again."

The brief points out that the same service could not be re-created as it was "for the situation is now much more complicated."

* * *

It believes, however, that "a completely workable system of container returns is possible if the government could be persuaded to move."

There would need to be changes in the industry pattern and it would cost the province something initially but it would be well worthwhile "if we could reverse the present march toward unordered littering in this field."

The AVIM resolution passed at Ladysmith is based on the "workable system" proposed by the nature council.

Let's hope it stirs the government to take a second look.

If it doesn't then it's easy to believe that the long-range effect of non-returnables will be to saddle the taxpayer with the cost of disposing of thousands (indeed millions) of such containers.

Penalties and regulations, although heavier and stiffer now than ever before, cannot cope with this type of land pollution. Enforcement is often too difficult.

Drying up this great mass of litter is the only solution. And that, as the nature council brief says, will only come by tossing these bottles and cans back where they belong—to those who initially caused the flood.

Queen Victoria? She's That Bronze Statue!

By NORM CRIBBENS

The tall bronze lady outside the Legislative Buildings is 150 years old today.

Nearly 1,000 Victoria schoolchildren celebrated Queen Victoria's birthday at the annual IODE ceremony staged on the soft green lawns of the Buildings—but few of them knew who she was.

"She was an old, old lady who lived a long, long time ago," said an 11-year-old girl student at Belmont Junior Secondary.

"She is that statue down there," answered a 12-year-old boy.

●

Many of the youngsters said they were celebrating the birthday of Victoria city but were vague about the queen.

This reporter has covered the IODE ceremony for almost 10 years and the impression today is that youngsters know less about Queen Victoria than those of, say, 1958.

The same view was gathered by Robin Burgess, a University of Victoria student reporter on the Times staff for the summer, who, six years ago, attended the ceremony as a Girl Guide.

Everything looks smaller now (she writes). Somehow the massive archway into the Buildings doesn't seem quite so massive and awesome as it did then.

●

I knew Queen Victoria was a ruler who died many years ago and that the city was named after her. But the main significance of the occasion was missing a whole half-day of school.

I was proud to be a Guide and to stand at attention in uniform with the other Guides. Today I was disappointed that the IODE flag-bearers did not wear white as they used to because that was very vivid in my memory.

That day in 1963 was particularly hot and I recall exciting rumors spreading through the ranks that cadets were fainting in the heat and St. John Ambulance Corps had gone to their aid.

Young as I was, I loved the pomp and circumstance of the occasion.

●

As in other years, Victoria schoolchildren today formed a massed choir on the steps of the Buildings. Their many-hued dresses and suits made a bold splash, offset by the flags and uniforms of the cadets.

Behind, in their vivid red blazers, were boys and girls of Esquimalt Junior Secondary School Band.

Facing them in soldierly array, were navy, army and air force cadets, Canadian Scottish cadets, St. John Nursing Cadets, Girl Guides and Brownies.

Hundred of spectators — many of them service veterans — watched the ceremony.

●

Making his first appearance at this event, Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson was guest of honor and faced the children from a blue, flower-decked dias.

He recalled that Queen

Benson Plans New Budget Next Month

Small Tax Changes Expected

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson said today he will bring down a budget next month.

He did not give a date.

Mr. Benson said simply "yes" when former prime minister John Diefenbaker asked in the Commons whether he will bring down a budget next month. The last budget was Oct. 22, 1968.

Mr. Diefenbaker asked whether the budget will contain legislation to meet the inflationary trend.

Mr. Benson said Mr. Diefenbaker would have to wait to see.

Mr. Benson said some time ago he intended to make a general review of the economy next month, but until today did not refer to it formally as a budget.

There have been indications the minister does not intend making any major changes in current tax rates. He has said government revenues and expenditures are running at about what he predicted last October. The prediction then was that he would balance the budget by next March 31, the end of the current fiscal year.

Some small tax changes may be made next month, primarily to tidy up current tax laws and plug loopholes in preparation for a general revision of tax law to be undertaken later this year.

SOUGHT MORE INFO

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked Prime Minister Trudeau whether the government is still working on the calculation that this year's inflationary factor will be 3½ per cent.

The prime minister replied that this will be discussed in Mr. Benson's budget speech.

The calculation was contained in the finance minister's last budget speech, in October.

Mr. Stanfield asked whether it is still the government's view that inflationary pressure has begun to ease.

The prime minister replied there is "no implication" that the government is not still concerned about inflation and will not adopt policies to curb it.

Outside the House, Mr. Benson turned aside questions about budget contents, advising reporters also to wait and see.

He did say, however, that the pre-budget policy paper on the state of the economy will be produced next week or early the following week.

Mr. Benson felt his economic forecasts in the last budget had been fulfilled reasonably well.

He said he will be able to balance the budget, but did not make it clear whether it will be done in the one next month. The government has promised a balanced budget.

'EXHAUSTED' BLAIBERG TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

BLAIBERG
. . . given oxygen

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Dr. Philip Blaiberg, 59, the world's longest-surviving heart transplant recipient, was taken to hospital by ambulance today — three days after doctors ordered him to bed in his apartment for a week-long rest cure to recover from "exhaustion."

Mrs. Blaiberg said her husband was admitted to hospital for x-ray examination which could not be performed in their apartment.

His condition is satisfactory and he is expected back home Monday, she said.

Blaiberg was given oxygen in the ambulance on the way to Groote Schuur Hospital.

Chinese Rejoin Malay Cabinet

KUALA LUMPUR (CP) — Chinese members of Malaysia's governing Alliance party were reported today to have reversed an earlier decision to quit the government and agreed to join a caretaker cabinet to govern the riot-torn country.

The riots between Chinese and Malays had been touched off by the decision of the Malaysian Chinese Association three days ago to withdraw following general elections that sharply reduced the Alliance's majority. The Chinese were the biggest election losers among the party's candidates, who included Malays and Indians.

The violence was subsiding today although sporadic gunfire would still be heard and a state of emergency declared Thursday night remained in effect.

The decision of the Chinese Association members to rejoin the govrnment was announced by Deputy Prime Minister Tun Abdul Razak, a Malay who on Thursday was appointed chief of the National Operations Council co-ordinating civil and military activities.

Razak told reporters the situation is still very serious.

He said tension spread to the Malaysian Borneo states of Sabah and Sarawak, where the government has suspended scheduled elections under new emergency regulations.

The emergency council was reported to have supplanted the federal and state parliaments, and sources said a new cabinet would be announced later today.

FIGUREHEAD STATUS?

There were some indications that Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman was being relegated to figurehead status, but Rahman said in a broadcast Thursday that Razak would be "answerable directly to me."

The council's first official act was to order all newspapers throughout the country to suspend publication. A spokesman said they would be allowed to re-open in a few days and pre-publication censorship then would be in effect.

The censorship rules do not apply to foreign correspondents.

Though officials continued to report relatively low casualty figures, conservative estimates placed the death toll in the four days of rioting at 200 persons.

Negotiators Hold Air Canada Talks

MONTREAL (CP) — Union and company negotiators in the Air Canada strike met face to face today for the first time since talks were resumed Wednesday.

Federal mediators Bernard Wilson and William Kelly, along with Charles Eyre, chief negotiator for Air Canada, held a brief meeting with union representatives in the union's room in a downtown labor department office building.

All parties then broke for lunch and were expected to resume talks later in the day.

Negotiations involving the mediators continued after extended sessions Thursday that went on until 4 a.m. today.

Cong Talking Tough But Studying Plan

PARIS (AP) — United States Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge formally presented President Nixon's eight-point plan at the Vietnam peace talks today and said afterward that the other side gave every indication it would consider the plan.

Lodge talked to reporters after the 17th full-scale session of the talks at which both North Vietnam and the Viet Cong guerrillas' South Vietnam National Liberation Front denounced the Nixon proposals without rejecting them outright.

The U.S. chief delegate declined to say whether he thought progress was made, but he said: "The other side gave every indication they will consider these proposals."

Hanoi's chief negotiator in Paris, Xuan Thuy, told the weekly session that the plan is an attempt to conceal American intentions of continuing aggression in Vietnam.

Tran Buu Kiem, representative of the National Liberation Front, said the plan was not a proper response to the problem.

Thuy asserted that the United States is bent "on maintaining its absurd demands and is continuing to intensify the war."

He said Nixon's words could not camouflage the essential objectives of the United States—"to achieve neocolonialism in South Vietnam and perpetuate the partition of Vietnam."

U.S. FLEXIBLE

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge formally presented the Nixon plan as a formula which "can accommodate the various programs" put forward by the other side.

Lodge called for detailed discussions of both the Nixon plan and the 10-point plan submitted a week ago by the NLF. He quoted the president as saying the U.S. proposals were not offered on a take-it-or-leave-it basis.

The attack of the North Vietnamese and NLF representatives, however, made it clear that the two sides still were far apart on major issues—even thought the two new initiatives might get the talks off dead centre.

Pham Dang Lam, South Vietnam's representative, referred only briefly to the Nixon plan, saying that it "demonstrated the good will of the United States" and was "consistent with the spirit" of Saigon's basic position.

In opening the session, North Vietnam's Thuy spoke contem-

B.C. Tel Accepts Conciliation Terms

B.C. Telephone Co. said today it is prepared to accept contract terms covering 6,600 employees recommended by a federal conciliation board.

Company president J. Ernest Richardson said the proposed wage increases would total $15 million over a two-year agreement and he added employees have been the highest-paid telephone workers in Canada.

The possibility of a rate increase loomed from his comment that "the reluctance on the part of the company to accept the . . . additional payroll costs stems partly from the knowledge that, at some point in time, growth in business will cease to generate the additional revenues required to meet these and other mounting costs."

A union spokesman said earlier this week that union negotiators will recommend to the membership that they reject the conciliation board's recommendations in a vote to be taken shortly.

Bargaining opened last October and the federal conciliation board was called in after negotiations were stalemated.

It's Warm on Venus—536 Above!

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet space ship Venus V reached the area of Venus today and sent down a capsule that radioed back information on the atmosphere during a 53-minute transmission, Tass news agency said.

Tass implied the instrument capsule reached the surface through the hot atmosphere, saying: "The station delivered to the surface of Venus a pennant with a bas relief of Lenin and the U.S.S.R. coat of arms."

Venus V dropped the capsule before entering the atmosphere. The capsule reported "a considerable growth of temperature" before its parachute system was released, Tass said.

"During the 53-minute-long descent on the parachute, the instruments on board the capsule measured the temperature, pressure and chemical composition of the atmosphere," the agency said.

The instrument capsule radioed that the atmosphere consisted mostly of carbon dioxide with temperatures running up to 536 degrees Farhenheit.

It seemed possible that the extreme heat melted parts of the Venus instrument capsule.

Jodrell Bank's radio observatory in England reported signals from the Venus V capsule lasted only 35 minutes.

"We don't know whether this is the end of the exercise or not," said Sir Bernard Lovell, head of the observatory. "But we will keep tracking as long as we can."

Lovell said the capsule from Russia's 1964 Venus spacecraft transmitted signals for 90 minutes.

"This time the capsule may have stopped higher up in the atmosphere or the rate of descent may have been faster," he said.

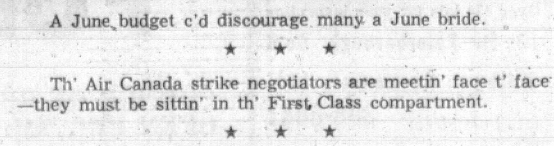
Shortly afterward, the Soviet news agency Tass announced that "the Soviet station Venus V softly descended in the atmosphere of Venus." It did not say whether it landed.

Jodrell Bank said the spacecraft entered the atmosphere of Venus seconds after 2 a.m. EDT. The craft's signal was lost for 20 minutes, then the big radio-telescope began picking up signals from the instrument capsule as it descended.

A twin spacecraft, Venus VI, is due to reach the planet Saturday morning. If both it and Venus V land their capsules successfully, two spaceships will be sending back scientific data on the mysteries of Venus simultaneously for the first time.

The Soviet Union made the first successful landing on Venus Oct. 18, 1964. That was done by Venus IV, and earlier Soviet Venus shots either missed the planet or crashed without sending back signals from the surface.

The last American Venus spaceship, Mariner V, passed close to the planet in 1967.



A June budget c'd discourage many a June bride.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Trade was light at the closing of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today.

Locals and commission houses traded in flax at lower levels.

Exporter interest on declining rapeseed prices continued. Volume was light.

Rye had local and commission house trade with some exporter interest in new crop futures.

Lakehead prices for class two, IGA and domestic wheat all were down ⅛ cent.

CHICAGO (AP) — Weather today affected commodity futures and prices reacted two different ways on the board of trade.

Trade was active only at the opening and the close.

A report that the weather had improved enough to permit limited work in some wet fields of the corn belt tended to influence liquidation of corn futures and prices closed lower.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., FRIDAY, MAY 16, 1969 —PAGE 21 ★★★

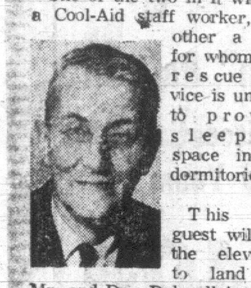
Arthur Mayse

Some evening soon, Louis or Marcelle Delesalle will lift the receiver from a ringing phone and hear a young voice on the line.

The caller will ask, "Is it okay if we bring someone out?"

Unless the hospitable Delesalles already have overnight guests, one or other will answer the question with a yes.

A few minutes later, a car will pull up in front of their pleasant home at 865 Kindersley.



One of the two in it will be a Cool-Aid staff worker, the other a boy for whom the rescue service is unable to provide sleeping space in its dormitories.

This next guest will be the eleventh to land on Mr. and Drs. Delesalle's doorstep. He will be given a room to sleep in, home-cooked meals, and unquestining kindness.

He may stay for one night or several, and weeks later, there's a chance that he, or possibly she, may write a thank-you letter from some other town.

Ex-RCN bandsman Delesalle and his wife are one couple of a dozen or more who have been housing the Cool-Aid overflow.

Like the others, they are volunteers, motivated by the kindness that is part of them, and by a conviction that no young wanderer should be left without a place to lay his head.

★

It surprises me not at all that they should be sharing their family life with youthful strangers. They have been doing so for many years.

Once when I called at their house, they were entertaining a batch of servicemen from the Centennial Tattoo. Any number of kids have been made free of the gymnastic equipment with which their place abounds.

A skilled flautist, Louis has taught many a Victoria student to play the flute, and refused to accept a nickel for his pains.

I asked these two the other day what they thought of the rovers, strays and castaways whom Cool-Aid occasionally asks them to take in.

Marcelle Delesalle gave me a prompt answer.

"They were really nice young people. Some were long-haired and some were short-haired, and not one of them gave us cause to wish we hadn't asked them out."

And from Louis: "When we started this, we were a little dubious about the effect on our two sons. We needn't have worried."

All the Delesalles ask of their visitors is a first name . . . "So we'll have something to call them." Sometimes after the initial strangeness wears off, last names are offered, along with other details.

★

"Some of them are out to see the country," Mrs. Delesalle said. "Most are looking for work. The youngest so far was about 17. Others were 18 and 19. None of them were runaways, or in trouble with the police . . . the Cool-Aid people were very clear about that."

The most impressive fact about them was that they appeared to be more concerned about people than things.

To a Victoria pair who are far from being starry-eyed sentimentalists, the sum of these encounters is a rewarding experience. They feel it has deepened their insight into youth's problems and aspirations.

Though they seek no reward, they have gained one.

Their sons have received sound council from young men not so much older than themselves. They have been warned away from drugs by those who have used drugs and given them up. The spurious glamor of the motocycle gang has been exploded for them by a guest who spoke from precise knowledge of one such gang.

What Louis and Marcelle Delesalle have taken on is no task for the moralizers, the self-righteous or the prejudiced.

But, like the Cool-Aid operation itself, its a job that needs doing in this city — and good luck to those with the compassion and courage to undertake it.

Ferries Crisis Ends As Parity Granted

Sunday Walkout Averted

A meeting here this morning defused a ticking time bomb which threatened to explode into a ferry strike on Sunday.

Representatives of both the government and some 1,000 licensed and unlicensed ferry personnel told reporters after their meeting that the wage parity issue had been resolved.

Norman Thornber, agent for some 600 unlicensed British Columbia Ferries seagoing personnel, said the nine-day-old "work to requirements" decision by union members would be "suspended immediately".

Letters to him and licensed personnel representatives from Civil Service Commission chairman Dr. Hugh Morrison resulted in ending the crisis which began May 7 when an ultimatum by the unions passed without government response.

The unions demanded a written undertaking that their current wage parity with non-government ferry workers on this coast would be maintained this fall.

The B.C. Ferries employees achieved parity with their private industry counterparts when they shared in the April 1 general increases to all provincial civil servants.

But, they pointed out, the unions representing private ferry workers were negotiating now for further wage increases this fall and they demanded assurances the government would match these.

TURN TO WALKOUT

Although no official announcefent was made, it was rumored the government ferry workers were preparing to turn their "work to requirements" protest into a walkout Sunday just before Premier Bennett was to board the Queen of Prince Rupert at Kelsey Bay for a northern trip.

NORMAN THORNBER
. . . back to normal

Dr. Morrison told the Times after the meeting with union representatives that the difficulty had involved an interpretation of the previous agreement relating to wage parity.

"The treasury board has advised us that they agree with the marine branches' suggestion that there could be a wage adjustment under that agreement — depending on the outside contracts, of course — so we are aiming for an Oct. target," said Dr. Morrison.

(Premier Bennett is chairman of the treasury board.)

MAINTAIN PARITY

"We had work this morning that parity in wages on a year-round basis would be maintained and we expect a further wage increase October 1st of this year," Thornber told reporters.

He said it was impossible to predict how much the increase would be because it would be tied to the outcome of three separate contract negotiations now under way in the private ferry field.

"We anticipate and sincerly hope that this will establish a pattern we can follow in the coming years so we don't have to go through this continuous battle over wages every year," he said.

The agreement may spur efforts by the 12,000-member B.C. Government Employees Association in its battle to obtain supplementary increases for various classifications who were unhappy with the size of their April 1 wage boosts.

But there was no immediate comment from the main civil service union.

Red Scum, Fallout Blamed For Deaths of Cattle Near Mill

By ED GOULD

Dairy farmer Henry Bonsall of Westholme blamed air and land pollition from nearby Crofton Pulp and Paper Limited for the death of six of his purebred Holstein cattle since August.

Bonsall, 45, has lived on the 106-acre property all his life but "polution from the mill now is worse than it has ever been and it's getting worse still."

He said he had sent samples of red scum taken from a slough and deposits of black "fallout" from ground depressions throughout the farm to the department of agriculture.

"The local department of agriculture man (Ken Jameson) said they reported no evidence of salt or blight," Bonsall said.

"I don't care what they call it but nothing grows in that field anymore."

He pointed out a slough of brackish water scummed with algea and soap-like bubbles which backs up from the dikes that ring his sea-level property.

He scooped up a handful of the reddish scum, about half an inch of one inch thick above the black earth. "I don't dare let cattle in this pasture anymore," he said. "I've lost too many in there already."

Bonsall described a cow found near death in the pasture: "Its mouth was all red and its pulse was real slow. The vet told me she had an abcessed liver."

DEATHS OF CATTLE

The cow lived but, "I got rid of her and shipped her out last week."

The cattle deaths were attributed to "causes unknown" by three other area veterinarians, Bonsall said. "Every one of them is afraid to attribute anything to that mill over there. I can't see what else it could be. I never had cattle die on me like that before."

He also showed a matchbox full of black residue which he said he had collected from "fallout" Thursday morning. Some pieces were about one inch in diameter.

"This stuff and the haze from the mill, which shifts with the wind, kills leaves on our rose bushes, clover and field crops," he said.

'RUN-AROUND'

He said the government and the pulp firm had been giving him "the run-around" for 10 years on the land and air pollution. On Thursday, a thick, gagging pall of acrid fumes hung over the area for the third straight day.

"The wind is against us and it sure is a pity on a beautiful day like this," neighbor Frank Blakemore said. "I was gassed in 1915 and this is the worse thing I've experienced since."

Another First World War veteran, Harold Bonsall, 72, who lives on 97 acres he used to farm adjacent to his nephew Henry Bonsall, said he had been "knocked right off my feet" by the fumes from the plant.

"We have to stay indoors when it's like this," Bonsall said. "Anyboly whose got chest trouble like me is crazy to go out in that."

'USED TO FUMES'

Dairy farmer Bonsall said people in the Westholme, Crofton area "just seem to have gotten used to this fog of fumes over the last few years.

"Ten years ago nobody gave a damn about pollution but now they are starting to wake up to the dangers of it. But it's only newcomers who visit here that really get upset anymore. I guess you can get used to anything."

Father of three children, he said none had suffered ill health that might have been attributed to the air pollution.

•

PCB CHECKING FARM FIELDS

A government spokesman said pollution control director C. J. Keenan "left immediately for Crofton" today after receiving the complaint about pollutel fields on the farm of Henry Bonsall.

Bonsall made the complaint to the Times who relayed it to the pollution control office.

Ask The Times

Q. A stamp was issued in 1961 marking the Colombo Plan. What was this plan? Also, who was Jean Talon? A stamp was issued honoring him in 1962.

A. The Colombo Plan, in which Canada participates, provided economic and technical assistance to countries in south and southeast Asia. Jean Talon was the first provincial administrator for New France. He helped settle Canada by introducing the homestead plan by which men were given land, some animals to stock it, and women were shipped from France to provide wives for the early settlers.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

'HE HIT HIGH SPOT IN HIS GENEVA PLAN'

A role for Victoria as the "New Geneva of the Pacific" was warmly received by the Oak Bay Kiwanis Club Thursday night.

"It was really, really good," said club president Mac Harris after James McCrossan presented his views on the city's future potential.

"It was very well received. He hit the high spot when he said that in time, or if we work at it, Victoria will be something like Switzerland."

McCrossan, a former British advertising man, who now is public relations director for Goodwill Enterprises, wants Victoria to become a centre for international agencies, conferences and company head offices "to blossom in the perfect environment for living".

The aim would be a new role for the city, other than a graveyrd for the old and the heavy emphasis on civil service employment.

Wife Slayer In for Life

Shows No Sign of Emotion As Sentence Handed Out

A Victoria man was sentenced to life imprisonment Thursday afternoon on a charge of shooting his wife to death in their bedroom early March 15.

William Clifford, 66, showed no sign of emotion when a jury of three women and nine men returned a verdict of guilty in Assize Court at 4:17 p.m.

Clifford was convicted of the non-capital murder of his wife Edna, 63, at their home at 1001 North Park.

Mr. Justice Thomas Dohm told him he had no alternative but to sentence him to life imprisonment.

In his 90-minute address to the jury, Mr. Justice Dohm said if they accepted that Clifford was so drunk he didn't know what he was doing, they could find him guilty on the lesser charge of manslaughter.

REASONABLE DOUBT

Defence counsel Foster Isherwood said there was no direct evidence as to who shot Mrs. Clifford.

"I say to you there is a reasonable doubt," he told the jury.

Isherwood said the testimony of Mrs. Ann Adams, who spent a night with the accused before the shooting, was "rather confused."

"She doesn't even remember the name of the hotel they stayed in," counsel said. "The two bottles of whisky and two cases of beer they consumed would make them both pretty high."

Isherwood suggested that the testimony of Clifford's son, James (34), was "colored" by his deep admiration for his mother.

'RESTRAINING ACTION'

James had testified that a physical encounter which took place between himself and his father before the shooting was "only a restraining action."

"But a 15 to 20-minute fight was quite long to be just a restraining action," Isherwood said.

Crown prosecutor Walter Anderson said there was no proof that Clifford did not remember shooting his wife.

"There was no evidence to that effect in the witness box," sounsel said.

Clifford did not give evidence during the trial. Defence counsel Isherwood said it was evident he had been drinking heavily and knew "nothing whatsoever of the shooting of his wife."

The trial lasted four days. Crown counsel Anderson was assisted by David R. Wilson.

Campers Urged Use Caution In Forests

The fire hazard on southern Vancouver Island is expected to rise from the present moderate to high levels over the holiday weekend bringing urgings of extra caution by campers and hikers.

One major fire battle is still under way in the area, more aren't wanted, said Vancouver distict forest protection officer Don Owen today.

"The situation is about normal for this time of year and although we haven't thought of any closure we have cancelled a few slash-burning permits because sufficient caution wasn't exhibited," he said.

DRYING OUT

"But with the number of people who will be going into the woods this weekend considerable care must be exercised because all the greenery hasn't come up yet and there's still a lot of dry material on the ground which could start a flash fire."

Owen said the sunny weather of the last few days has added to the hazard by drying out lower elevations even though snow still exists at the 2,500-foot line.

He reported a 150-acre blaze on the west side of Cowichan Lake was "quiet" this morning.

The fire broke out Thursday afternoon in Crown Zellerbach Nitinat working division.

The first sorties of the season were flown by the big water-bombers—a Mars and a Canso—to contain the outbreak and 150 men with tank-trucks were deployed around the fire's perimeter.

Owen said a number of small spot blazes also were reported in other logging operations on southern Vancouver Island indicating increasing dryness in the woods.

IN THE MIDST of final preparations for their annual exhibition the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce Thursday elected Stan Wallis president for the 1969-70 term. He succeeds Lorne Whyte. Others named to the executive include Gary Weir, first vice-president; Jack Purcell, second vice-president; Norm McLaren, secretary, and Meron Simpson, exhibition director. Jaycees are busy supervising the installation of exhibits at the Memorial Arean for the fair which opens Monday. (Jorgen Svendsen photp.)

Victoria Shines in Selection of Favored Few

Three of the six girls chosen from 1,200 applications for postings as guides in British Columbia's pavilion at Expo 70 in Japan are Victorians.

They are: Miss Victoria, Pamela Gillan; Bernice Elva Starr, a Haisla Indian and registered nurse at St. Joseph's Hospital, and Patricia Heaslip, who began working in Abbotsford as a high school teacher last September.

Miss Gillan, 21, lives at 1724 Garnet Road, and is a receptionist-hostess who won the Jaycee crown as Miss Victoria last year.

Miss Starr, 24, came here from Kitimat to take up her career in nursing but also has done some travelling within North America as a United Nations Club member.

Miss Heaslip, 25, is a native of Victoria who entered teaching after graduation from the University of Victoria. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Heaslip, live at 1025 Greenridge Crescent.

The other three girls chosen were Deanna McCrea, 25, a receptionist in Vancouver; Pamela Mahony, 23, an elementary school teacher in New Westminster, and Diana Timms, 25, a personnel counsellor in Vancouver.

The six British Columbia girls will work with a staff of 20 Japanese usherettes at the province's $2 million pavilion in Osaka for about 10 months next year.

They will be trained in Japanese food customs, living conditions and language before going to Japan.

The selections were announced Thursday in Vancouver by Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce Minister Waldo Skillings, who said they "were felt to be the most representative, in every respect, of the young people of our province".

CHICAGO (AP) — Weather today affected commodity futures and prices reacted two different ways on the board of trade.

Trade was active only at the opening and the close.

A report that the weather had improved enough to permit limited work in some wet fields of the corn belt tended to influence liquidation of corn futures and prices closed lower.
